LACK OF FUNDS HALTS INQUIRY

Hurley Recesses Parole Jury Indefinitely After Talk With Attorney General.

however, declined to comment on the future of the parole investigation.

Lacks Investigating Funds.

International News Service reported that Duffy was believed to be unwilling to dip any further into Richland county funds until he is assured that the legislature will appropriate enough money to defray his own investigating costs. That was believed to be the reason Duffy summoned Hurley, Assistant Attorney General Paul Hergenroeder and Investigators John Kilbane and Albert Frazier back to Columbus.

His only comment, according to International News Service, was: "I want to talk over the investigation with Mr. Hurley. So far the state has spent between $3,300 and $3,400 in Franklin and Richland counties on the probe."

The Associated Press reported that Duffy was of the opinion that it would be useless to gather information at the expense of Richland county if he was unable, through lack of funds, to pursue "leads" uncovered in the investigation here.

The United Press said that unless funds are made available Duffy might never call special grand juries in other counties where he has planned investigations. Those counties include Madison, Union, Summit, Cuyahoga, Allen, Stark, Mahoning and Lucas.

Costs County $600

Records at the courthouse today showed that Richland county has spent nearly $600 in jury and witness fees in the investigation so far, aside from the money spent by the state. When Duffy called the grand jury, county officials were informed that they would have to bear the usual grand jury costs. To date, fees of the 15 jurors, including mileage, has been $555 for 12 days they have been in session, and witness fees have amounted to $41. Bills for stenographers and bailiffs have not yet been submitted.

Prosecutor Glenn W. Marriott and Clerk Fred Zellner said they knew of no protest from the county to Duffy concerning the expense of the grand jury, but most county officials have voiced their disapproval of inflicting the cost of the inquiry on the county.

The Franklin county grand jury was the first called by Duffy. It submitted a partial report and recessed, and the Richland grand jury was the second to be called. It submitted no report yesterday, the sudden recess called by Duffy precluding the preparation of a report.

When he started the investigation, at the request of Gov. Martin L. Davey, Duffy asked for a legislative appropriation of $25,000. The senate approved an appropriation of $20,000 but the house failed to add its approval. Later an attempt was made to attach the $20,000 appropriation as a "rider" to another bill, but the house defeated this move.

The Franklin county grand jury was in session from Nov. 22 to Jan. 12. The Richland grand jury convened on Jan. 17.

Thomas C. Jenkins, former superintendent of the Mansfield reformatory, had returned to Mansfield yesterday morning from London, where he is head of London prison farm, to testify, but he was not called into the grand jury room.

The jury spent a major portion of its time investigating financial transactions of the reformatory dating back to 1925, but did hear testimony from a number of inmates. Hurley said the investigation of financial transactions "tied in" with the parole investigation.

Anti-Sales Tax League Signs Up Richland Backers

The Anti-Sales Tax League of Ohio, organized at Akron a month ago, moved its forces into Mansfield and Richland county today in a campaign to eliminate the retail sales tax from all commodities except motor fuels.

Three petition bearers and solicitors will be in the city and county until the last of next week, it was said, to obtain signatures in an effort to place the sales tax question before Ohio voters at the November election.

The league, headed by Dr. Oscar Hayes of Akron, seeks at least 350,000 signatures by September, the number neseccary to have the proposed amendment to the state constitution placed on the ballot. About 50,000 signatures already have been obtained, a representative of the organization said today.

Expenses of conducting the anti-sales tax drive are paid from contributions of merchants and business establishments. Members of the league base their campaign on the contention that the sales tax is crippling the buying power of the people by $52,000,000 annually, the amount of sales tax collected.

'White Flame' Murder Trial to Reach Jurors Monday

TESTIMONY IN WIFE-SLAYING NEARING CLOSE

Psychiatrist Testifies Air Official Might Have Been Unaware of Actions.

(By International News Service)

LOS ANGELES—The "white flame" murder trial of Paul A. Wright, accused killer of his wife and his friend, John B. Kimmel, neared a close today, and will probably go to the jury by Monday or Tuesday.

Should Wright, who killed his pretty, auburn-haired wife, Evelyn, 32, and Kimmel because, as he claims, he saw them sitting in the Wright living room on the morning of November 9 in a passionate, illicit embrace, be found guilty in any degree, he must then face an insanity trial.

Clean Up Testimony.

The intense excitement of the trial occasioned by Wright's sensational testimony having ended, opposing counsel began "mopping up" the odds and ends of the case today in the hopes that by Monday they could begin their arguments to the jury of nine men and three women in whose hands Wright's fate rests.

Wright may be called back to the stand by the prosecution for further cross-examination, but Prosecutor Ernest Roll was not sure whether or not he would place the former manager of the Union Air terminal on the stand again.

The "white flame" killer ended a two-and-a-half day ordeal yesterday, being called to the stand for redirect examination by Jerry Giesler, his chief counsel.

He was followed by a psychiatrist, Dr. Samuel W. Marcus, called by Giesler to bear out the defense's contention that Wright, already unstable from past experiences, received a mental shock when he saw his wife and Kimmel in a strange embrace, did not know what he was doing thereafter, and does not know now, of his own knowledge.

Tells of 'Shocks.'

Dr. Marcus testified, in effect, that a person receiving a severe mental shock might be rendered "unconscious" or unaware of his actions, and during that period, might perform physical acts automatically and without knowledge thereof.

He added that it could happen that a person, performing certain acts during such a period of shock, might be awakened to realization that he must be responsible by the sight of the physical effects of such an act—a gun in his hand, two persons lying on the floor amid a pool of blood.

Butler Man, 76, Heads Ashland Big Game Hunters

Willis Countryman, of Butler, who at 76 is still as active and expert a big game hunter as many men a score of years his junior, was elected president of the Ashland County Big Game Hunters association at its ninth annual meeting in Ashland last night.

He succeeds Judge S. H. Boffenmyer of Ashland. Countryman was presented with a leather letter case following his election. In addition to being elected head of the organization, composed of Ashland and Richland county hunters, Countryman was the unofficial host at the venison dinner which preceded the election. The venison came from a deer Countryman shot in Canada.

Harry E. Hire was re-elected secretary of the club. Following the dinner, Ronald Boffenmyer presented a number of magic tricks, and Harvey Fleck, Mansfield huntsman, showed pictures of a hunting trip he made into Mexico. Hire showed pictures of a fishing trip in Mexican waters.

'Little Business' Sends Plan to Roosevelt

Up and Down THE STREET

William C. Mead, a member of the school board who has consistently refused to go to the games on passes, although entitled to the free ducats, went to his first game this week on a free ticket. An Ashlander, knowing Mead's enthusiasm for basketball and his loyalty to Mansfield high, sent him free tickets to the Mansfield-Ashland game in that city—probably figuring the Ashlanders were due to beat Mansfield. But Bill had the last laugh, for he not only went to the game on a pass, but his favorite team beat Ashland 28 to 24.

Dr. and Mrs. Kenson, former Mansfield residents now living in Hollywood, were guests of the Olsons recently, and they were expecting Mrs. Mary Carter, 82 Sturges avenue, who left Mansfield several days ago, to spend the remainder of the winter in Phoenix.

It's going to be difficult for workers in the Richland county probate and juvenile departments to have secrets in the future. A new two-way communication system, the first in the courthouse, has been installed in Judge C. J. With a microphone and receiver in each one of the rooms, the snapping of a switch permits conversation between any of the departments without leaving the room or the use of a telephone.

BOARD PROBES MID-AIR CRASH

Navy Pauses In Maneuvers as Inquiry Opens In Tragedy Which Killed 11.

(By United Press)

SAN DIEGO—The Navy's war games paused today while a board of inquiry attempted to retrieve some profitable information from Wednesday night's disaster—the collision of two bombing planes that cost 11 lives.

Out of this regrettable and costly accident," Rear Admiral Charles A. Blakely said, "We may arrive at a new safety feature in aircraft maneuvers."

The two giant planes locked wings while being maneuvered into close formation during darkness and a squall. The cause of the crash was not given officially, but it was reported that a gust of wind had caused them to drift together. They locked, one plane burst into flames, and both plunged down and sank in the ocean. Four men on one plane leaped out in parachutes and were picked up from the water. One of them died later of his injuries.

The 98 warships and more than 300 planes, assembled off the coast for war games under realistic conditions, were maneuvering in darkness against a theoretical enemy invader.

Aboard one plane, Lieut. Carlton P. Hutchins ordered his men to leap through a bomb rack opening when the crash occurred. Four of them escaped from the plane. J. H. Hester, radioman first class, one of the four picked up by the crew of a crashboat from the flagship Pennsylvania, died of his injuries yesterday.

BLOND, WED AT 11, GRANDMOTHER AT 37, HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

(By Associated Press)

FREEHOLD, N. J.—Blond Ethel Rounds, wed at 11 and a grandmother now at 37, was charged with murder today after all-night questioning concerning the shooting of a 40-year-old handyman who died in front of the deserted bar in her roadside tavern.

Arraigned before Justice of the Peace Fred Quinn on a complaint signed by State Police Corporal Edward O'Hare, she declared she was innocent and was held without bail for grand jury action.

"He grabbed the gun but I beat him to it," she told the court, and "it went off in my hand."

Her husband Frank, who said he married her when he was 23 and she "about 11," shoved aside police who tried to restrain him and, shouting "I want to kiss her," threw his arms around the thin, blue-eyed woman, haggard after a sleepless night.

Assistant Monmouth County Prosecutor Charles Frankel said Mrs. Rounds declared her relations with Edward Rooney, who was found sprawled dead in front of the bar last night, were "purely platonic."

An Asbury Park nurse, whom Frankel identified as Mrs. Norma Fisher, was "the other woman in the case," he said, adding she had told him of receiving an unsigned letter threatening bodily harm to Rooney.

Rooney and Mrs. Fisher, a widow with a son, planned to marry next month, Frankel said.

CONFEREES ON NATION'S ILLS LEAVE CAPITAL

Committee Remains to Give Report to President After Stormy Parleys.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—President Roosevelt today declared that it was not fair to ridicule the small business men or the efforts of their conference.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—The captains and the kings of "little business" dispersed today—some in sorrow and some in anger—but a committee remained to tell President Roosevelt that many of their recovery ideas failed to jibe with those of his administration.

Their message, a long statement of recommendations on government-business relations, was entrusted to 11 men headed by Fred Roth of Cleveland.

Roth led the delegation to the White House at 11 a. m., by virtue of his chairmanship of the noisy two-day conference of a thousand "little fellows."

The committee members consolidated the resolutions, which had been thicker than on a New Year's morning, after the general session ended yesterday in characteristic uproar.

Opinions Divided.

Other delegates, turning homeward wearily—and in some cases bitterly—were divided over the results of the meeting, to which they paid their own expenses.

Some said it was a failure. Others declared that it had directed attention to the needs of the butcher, the baker, and the candlestick maker.

Edwin M. McKinney of Chicago said he and many other delegates were "ashamed to go home" because of the disorders which marked the conference sessions.

The recommendations adopted included demands for an end to "fear of further undue government interference" in business, and abandonment of all attempts to "regulate or control the operations of private business or industry."

Opposition was expressed to "all forms of federal wage and hour regulations." Criticisms were made of the undistributed profits, capital gains and "closely-held" corporation taxes, and of the present system of unemployment compensation taxes imposed under the social security program.

The conference proposed that the government underwrite bank loans to small business as a means of easing credit and, if this proved unfeasible, to make direct loans through a federal agency.

Strict enforcement of monopoly law was another request. A tax on chain stores was proposed.

The Great Game of Politics

—By FRANK R. KENT

Another Faithful Threatened.

POLITICIANS are practical people; otherwise they would not be politicians. Or, at any rate, they would not remain in politics. It is, therefore, natural that with the 1938 primaries not many months ahead political circles should be impressed with an interesting fact, to which attention has been called in this place before—and several examples given.

It simply is this the Democratic senators who steadily supported Mr. Roosevelt in all his policies are in much greater danger of being "liquidated" than the Democratic senators who opposed the president—particularly on his court plans—and were publicly threatened with elimination by various New Deal spokesmen. When the vociferous insistences upon a "party purge" are recalled the present situation is not without humor— though that phase of it does not appeal to the senators who thought all they had to do to be saved was to "stand by the president," and now find themselves in trouble with no president standing by them.

THE disingenuous administration explanations that these primary contests are natural; that competition is wholesome and that after all the fights are "between Democrats," does not by any means lighten the rueful reflections of the pro-Roosevelt senators nor diminish the significance of the complete failure of those purging prophecies. It is true that the recent visit of Governor Chandler to Washington has somewhat lessened the sufferings of Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, whose seat is threatened. But that is because Governor Chandler's effort to make a deal with the president involving a federal judgeship was particularly stupid politics.

IT IS TRUE, too, that the president is openly for Senator Barkley. He cannot afford to be anything else. Senator Barkley is his official floor leader in the senate. To lose him would be not only a blow to the presidential prestige but would leave his senate following in a state of demoralization. Information from Kentucky, however, is that the presidential support by no means insures Senator Barkley's re-turn, though that is expected. The Chandler machine is dominant in the party and unless Governor "Happy" weakens, "Dear Alben" will have to fight with everything he has This, for a statesman who felt that when he had achieved the senate leadership he would be unopposed in his state, is anything but pleasant.

POLITICIANS note such things carefully. In this situation they note, too, that the presidential support extended to the leader is not being extended to others equally loyal and in even more trouble. Senator Dieterich, of Illinois, for example, has been chucked overboard by the Kelly-Nash machine without so much as a White House wave of the hand. Nor is there any suggestion that administration help will be given Senator F. Ryan Duffy, of Wisconsin, who in six years has not once wavered in his support. Indeed, the Duffy loyalty has been such that it is difficult to see how the administration can fail to be embarrassed.

YET, THE White House relations with the La Follette brothers are such that no one thinks Senator Duffy has any chance of returning. He will have the support of the Democratic state committee, but that is a shadowy party remnant which has had no national political support and almost no federal patronage. The federal jobs and the federal funds have gone largely to the La Follette Progressives. It is their state. They carried Wisconsin for Mr. Roosevelt in 1932 and 1936. The alliance is clear, concrete, open. The Progressives want the Duffy seat for a Progressive. It is possible Gov. Philip La Follette may decide to run for the senate or, if he does not, then some other Progressive will.

THE NAME of Gerald Boileau, now in the house, is mentioned; also that of Dan Hoan, the Socialist mayor of Milwaukee. From time to time, Governor La Follette has been suggested as likely to succeed Attorney General Cummings in the Roosevelt cabinet. Close to the president, he is a strong, vibrant, attractive figure who would become an outstanding member of the administration if he entered it, though at this late date, that he would care to do so is unlikely. In any event, Senator Duffy, with his six-year record of complete support, is in a pack of trouble. He can get—if he wants it—the Democratic nomination, but no one thinks he will have presidential support in the general election against a La Follette or a La Follette man. And without that he is sunk. When this, and the cases of other New Deal senators to come up this year, are considered, it is not surprising the politicians should be impressed; nor that the menaced candidates are not greatly comforted by the assurance that this is just a "family fight," and, anyhow, a Republican will not win.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Groucho Marx is going to wear a mustache—a real one—in the Marx trio's next picture, "Room Service."

And Harpo and Chico will appear in more conservative attire, although Harpo will retain his red wig and his wild-eyed insanity.

All of which portends a Big Step for the brothers. For the first time they will attempt characters that have been previously created on the stage by others, for the first time they will appear in a ready-made play that was not fashioned for their own exclusive zany uses.

"If we succeed," says Groucho, the sad-eyed, the soft-voiced, "we'll be opening up an entirely new field for ourselves. If we don't—

Groucho seriously has his doubts about the piece as a Marxian vehicle, thinks it is worth the gamble for the reward it will bring if happily received.

"We make only one picture a year, to keep the public from catching on to us," he explains. "When the public catches on to an actor he may as well fold up. I know—I myself have caught on to some of our best stars, and they're the ones I don't go out of my way to see on the screen. 'Room Service' will be something new for us, and we hope will serve to defer the evil day when the public does catch on."

However, there is yet hope for those who prefer their Marxes unhampered by such sanities as play construction. "Room Service" will be tailored to fit, partially at least, the starring brothers. Already, as is their custom, they are going into conferences with gag-writers, producer, director and themselves. In these sessions they elaborate, discuss, suggest innovations. In the heat of creation, they have been known to laugh uproariously, sulk gloomily, or mutter madly.

"We put gags in and we throw gags out. We sometimes throw the writers out, and the producer—and there are times when we throw ourselves out," Thus Groucho, summarizing the technique of conferences.

"If you," he says to me with hidden meaning which I think I resent, "should laugh at one of our gags in conference, we most certainly would throw that one out. But if an audience laughs—even though we know the gag is terrible—we leave it in. We operate on the idea that the public pays for what it wants, and it's up to us to give it to them. No actor, though some of us think so, is out there to entertain himself. He's there to amuse the public."

As is their custom, the Marxes will take their version of "Room Service" on the road, in tabloid form, to get audience reaction before they start filming. In preparation, Groucho already has begun growing his real mustache.

The passing of the painted mustache is to be lamented, for all that. It has had a long and honorable history. It was born years ago, in a New York theater, when the Marxes were doing four and five shows a day. In those days Groucho, for each performance, pasted on a crepe mustache. But repeated application and removal made his skin rebel. One day he painted the ornament on, and nobody cared — except the theater manager.

15 CHOSEN FOR ROLES IN SENIOR HIGH OPERETTA

Vocal Department to Present 'The Bells of Capistrano' Aprol 8 at School.

Fifteen students of the vocal department at Senior high school were selected today for roles in the operetta, "The Bells of Capistrano" to be given April 8 in the high school auditorium.

The feminine lead in the production will be divided between Kathleen MacIntosh and June Stattler, with David McGinty in the male lead. Miss Stattler will take the major feminine role for the afternoon performance, and Miss MacIntosh in the evening.

The operetta will be presented in three acts, with members of the boys' and girls' glee clubs, and the A Capella choir assisting. The production will be under the direction of J. Merton Holcombe, director of vocal music at the school. Assistant directors will be Jane Miller and Dale Bechtel. Margaret Kochheiser was named general manager for the show.

An orchestra to be selected by Holcombe will furnish the accompaniment.

INCOME TAX IN NUTSHELL

NO. 11

Gross Income, Net Income, and Surtax Net Income.

Three of the terms used in the income-tax law, namely, gross income, net income, and surtax net income, should be noted particularly, inasmuch as they are vitally important to the whole subject of the income tax.

Gross income includes in general all income from any source whatever, unless exempt from tax by law. The gross income of the usual business consists of the gross profits on sales, plus any income from investments and incidental or outside operations or sources. The return must show the gross sales, purchases, and cost of goods sold. To reflect income correctly, inventories are necessary at the beginning and end of each taxable year.

A lawyer, doctor, architect, physician, dentist, clergyman, author, or other professional man must include in gross income all fees, salaries, and compensation of any kind for professional services.

Net income upon which the tax is assessed is gross income less the deductions allowed by law. Such deductions include business and professional expenses, such as salaries, pensions, and bonuses to employes, taxes, losses, interest, bad debts, depreciation, depletion, contributions, etc. Failure to understand deductions against gross income and credits against net income has resulted in numerous errors on the part of taxpayers.

An earned income credit is provided in addition to the personal exemption and credit for dependents, etc., for the purpose of computing the normal tax. Having arrived at the net income, the next step is to deduct the personal exemption and credit for dependents. The balance represents the surtax net income. The next step is to deduct from such balance the earned income credit and other credits to which the taxpayer is entitled. The remainder represents the amount of net income subject to the normal tax of 4 per cent. Any amount of surtax net income which is in excess of $4,000, is subject to the surtax. The surtax is to be computed in accordance with the rates provided for in the various so-called surtax brackets.

THEATER

IF Poulette Goddard pleases the millions of readers of "Gone With The Wind," it will be a miracle. This is the most exacting role in screen history, because of the intense interest in it, and Miss Goddard is without experience in talking pictures. She played a small role in Chaplin's last picture, "Modern Times," which was a silent film. The one decided advantage is that she is unknown and therefore readers of the book can't object to a person they've never seen. The selection of almost any famous actress for the role of Scarlett O'Hara would have launched an avalanche of criticism, because it wasn't possible to please everyone. The selection of the actor to play Rhett Butler hasn't been announced, if it has been made, although it is generally assumed that Clark Gable will draw the plum.

Comedians Well Teamed.

Stuart Erwin and Una Merkel, who play leads in support of Jane Withers in "Checkers," are well teamed for Erwin is the masculine of all that Miss Merkel represents. They both are comedians of the "real" type; both are slow of speech and both play the same type of characters. In "Checkers," Erwin is a horse trader and race track follower who conducts a seven year courtship of Miss Merkel, who refuses to fill her hope chest with horse blankets. Their romance gets a lot of setbacks, but comes to a success-ful cilmax with little Miss Withers pinch-hitting for Cupid. The picture is the Ohio attraction for the last of the week.

Chan On Vacation.

Story Behind Deadlock.

When a jury is deadlocked by one vote in a murder trial in which every bit of evidence points to the defendant's guilt, and that one juryman holds out stubbornly until a "disagreement" is agreed upon, there is bound to be a reason behind it. In "The Jury's Secret" which opens at the Majestic today, there is not only a reason but a strange story. And the story is that one juror knows the actual murderer and that the defendant is innocent—but he dare not tell his secret. Kent Taylor, Fay Wray, Larry Blake and Nan Grey head the cast. The second feature is the stirring picture drama made from James Fenimore Cooper's American epic, "Last of The Mohicans," with Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes and Philip Reed.

Western Hero No. 1.

There is no accounting for the trend in American movie idols, but certainly one of the greatest changes is on the type of Western hero that now appeals to movie goers. A few years ago Tom Mix was way out in front of all other movie stars in box office attraction, and like his predecessor, William S. Hart, he held his place with his ability to handle two guns, ride like the wind and master any situation. Today the leading Western attraction at the box office is Gene Autry—who holds his place with a crooning voice instead of dexterity with a gun. Autry, "singing cowboy," strictly of the Hollywood type, is the idol of small boys today. His producers have capitalized on this by calling his latest picture "Public Cowboy No. 1." It opens at the Ritz today, on the same bill with Herbert Marshall and Barbara Stanwyck in "Breakfast For Two."

Mansfield visiting nurses assisted at 238 births in private homes during 1937, the annual report of the nurses association said today.

The nurses also cared for 160 prenatal cases during the year. The report added that a total of 1,413 cases were attended by the nurses, and of this number, 72 per cent were free cases while the nurses were paid for all or part of their services in the remainder.

A greater part of the support of the association comes from the Community Fund and private subscriptions.

The total number of visits made by the four nurses on the association staff was 8,118, of which 5,704 were made to private homes and 2,414 to hospitals and physicians' offices.

INCOME TAX IN NUTSHELL

NO. 11

Gross Income, Net Income, and Surtax Net Income.

Three of the terms used in the income-tax law, namely gross income, net income, and surtax net income, should be noted particularly, inasmuch as they are vitally important to the whole subject of the income tax

Gross income includes in general all income from any source whatever, unless exempt from tax by law The gross income of the usual business consists of the gross profits on sales, plus any income from investments and incidental or outside operations or sources. The return must show the gross sales, purchases, and cost of goods sold To reflect income correctly, inventories are necessary at the beginning and end of each taxable year

A lawyer, doctor, architect, physician, dentist, clergyman, author, or other professional man must include in gross income all fees, salaries, and compensation of any kind for professional services.

Net income upon which the tax is assessed is gross income less the deductions allowed by law. Such deductions include business and professional expenses, such as salaries, pensions, and bonuses to employes, taxes, losses, interest, bad debts, depreciation, depletion contributions, etc. Failure to understand deductions against gross income and credits against net income has resulted in numerous errors on the part of taxpayers

An earned income credit is provided in addition to the personal exemption and credit for dependents, etc., for the purpose of computing the normal tax Having arrived at the net income, the next step is to deduct the personal exemption and credit for dependents The balance represents the surtax net income. The next step is to deduct from such balance the earned income credit and other credits to which the taxpayer is entitled. The remainder represents the amount of net income subject to the normal tax of 4 per cent Any amount of surtax net income which is in excess of $4,000 is subject to the surtax The surtax is to be computed in accordance with the rates provided for in the various so-called surtax brackets

IF Poulette Goddard pleases the millions of readers of "Gone With The Wind," it will be a miracle. This is the most exacting role in screen history, because of the intense interest in it, and Miss Goddard is without experience in talking pictures. She played a small role in Chaplin's last picture, "Modern Times," which was a silent film. The one decided advantage is that she is unknown and therefore readers of the book can't object to a person they've never seen. The selection of almost any famous actress for the role of Scarlett O'Hara would have launched an avalanche of criticism, because it wasn't possible to please everyone. The selection of the actor to play Rhett Butler hasn't been announced, if it has been made, although it is generally assumed that Clark Gable will draw the plum.

Comedians Well Teamed.

Stuart Erwin and Una Merkel, who play leads in support of Jane Withers in "Checkers," are well teamed for Erwin is the masculine of all that Miss Merkel represents They both are comedians of the "real" type, both are slow of speech and both play the same type of characters In "Checkers," Erwin is a horse trader and race track follower who conducts a seven year courtship of Miss Merkel, who refuses to fill her hope chest with horse blankets Their romance gets a lot of setbacks, but comes to a successful climax with little Miss Withers pinch-hitting for Cupid. The picture is the Ohio attraction for the last of the week.

Chan On Vacation.

Story Behind Deadlock.

When a jury is deadlocked by one vote in a murder trial in which every bit of evidence points to the defendant's guilt, and that one juryman holds out stubbornly until a "disagreement" is agreed upon, there is bound to be a reason behind it In "The Jury's Secret" which opens at the Majestic today, there is not only a reason but a strange story And the story is that one juror knows the actual murderer and that the defendant is innocent—but he dare not tell his secret. Kent Taylor, Fay Wray Larry Blake and Nan Grey head the cast. The second feature is the stirring picture drama made from James Fenimore Cooper's American epic, "Last of The Mohicans," with Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes and Philip Reed.

Western Hero No. 1.

There is no accounting for the trend in American movie idols, but certainly one of the greatest changes is on the type of Western hero that now appeals to movie goers A few years ago Tom Mix was way out in front of all other movie stars in box office attraction, and like his predecessor, William S. Hart, he held his place with his ability to handle two guns, ride like the wind and master any situation. Today the leading Western attraction at the box office is Gene Autry—who holds his place with a crooning voice instead of dexterity with a gun. Autry, "singing cowboy," strictly of the Hollywood type, is the idol of small boys today. His producers have capitalized on this by calling his latest picture "Public Cowboy No. 1" It opens at the Ritz today, on the same bill with Herbert Marshall and Barbara Stanwyck in "Breakfast For Two."

Mansfield visiting nurses assisted at 238 births in private homes during 1937, the annual report of the nurses association said today.

The nurses also cared for 160 prenatal cases during the year. The report added that a total of 1,413 cases were attended by the nurses, and of this number, 72 per cent were free cases while the nurses were paid for all or part of their services in the remainder.

A greater part of the support of the association comes from the Community Fund and private subscriptions.

The total number of visits made by the four nurses on the association staff was 8,118, of which 5,704 were made to private homes and 2,414 to hospitals and physicians' offices.

PAM—Frightened! By A. W. Brewerton

IT WAS AT THE DORNLEY HOTEL — WHEN I WAS HELD PRISONER THERE!—THAT MAN —HE PASSED THROUGH ONE OF THE ROOMS ONCE—MUST NOT HAVE BEEN CAPTURED WITH THE OTHERS!
JUST THEN THIS MAN AND HIS COMPANION ENTERED THE PLANE AND TOOK A SEAT DIRECTLY BACK OF PAM!
OH, DEAR!—WONDER IF HE KNOWS ME?—IF I'D BETTER GET OFF THE PLANE—
THE MAN HAD A HARD AND SINISTER LOOK—A CRUEL FACE—ONE YOU'D NOT SOON FORGET!
BUT THE HUGE PLANE HAS QUICKLY TAKEN OFF! TOO LATE FOR PAM TO DISEMBARK NOW, IF SHE WOULD! WHAT WILL HAPPEN?—IS THIS MAN TRAILING HER?

DIP IN PHONE ISSUES ADDS TO MARKET GRIEF

American Telephone Drops 3 Points to New Low Before Meeting Support.

NEW YORK — (AP) — Another break in American Telephone, which dropped more than 3 points to a new low since 1935, before meeting support, put a further blight on today's stock market.

While declines running to a point or so were widely distributed at the opening, volume dried up appreciably near the second hour and extreme losses were reduced in many cases and there were a few gainers. Bonds and commodities failed to establish a definite trend.

Announcement of a cut in prices by Packard was seen as more encouraging than otherwise by motor observers, hopes being revived for sales stimulation.

Wall Street also appeared to be pleased at the proposals made by the "little business" men's conference at Washington for ending the recession, these coinciding with suggestions previously made by large industrialists.

Dun & Bradstreet, surveying public spending throughout the country, found little improvement in this week's retail distribution. Few districts, it was said, were able to show a gain over the comparable 1937 week.

Wholesale trade was believed to have done better than in the preceding week, but was somewhat under the totals of a year ago.

Reduced payrolls and curtailed employment, the review added, helped to slacken the pace of consumer buying in most leading centers.

SLAYER, 70, CAPTURED

Surrenders to Troopers In Town 3 Miles From Home For Aged Residents.

(By Associated Press)

TEWKSBURY, Mass. — Three inmates of a state infirmary were slain and two others wounded critically early today, state police charged, by a 70-year-old giant inmate who ran amuck with a revolver and was at large for three hours before being captured in nearby Lowell.

The dead were: Michael O'Keefe, 70; Edward Mercier, 70, and James Magee, 78. Joseph O'Donnell, 55, and John Lewis, 76, were in a critical condition.

Flees After Shooting.

The alleged assailant was John Mack, 70, of Chelsea, six-foot three inmate who fled the institution after the shootings. Nearly three hours later he was picked up in Lowell three miles away by two Lowell policemen after squads of state troopers and city police had concentrated on the wooded area around the institution here.

Mack was immediately placed in a cell at Lowell police headquarters. He offered no resistance and was unarmed when captured.

Patrolman Thomas Nelson said Mack was booked on a murder charge. He was not questioned pending the arrival of Capt. John F. Stokes, chief of state detectives.

Massachusetts Public Safety Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeney and state detectives were at the infirmary a short time after the shooting endeavoring to learn where the pistol was obtained and the motive for the attack.

Mack was admitted to the institution in October, 1937, but officials said he had been "in and

Expect Roosevelt To Broadcast New "Fireside Chat"

WASHINGTON —(INS)— Another "fireside chat" by President Roosevelt was understood to be in the near offing today.

As one more in his radio sequels outlining New Deal administrative policy toward capital and labor, such a speech is being urged by all lines of economic thought.

Small business men, who have been holding turbulent, humorous and sometime riotous sessions here since Wednesday, were expected to send a delegation to the White House today proposing a "fireside chat" in which the president would promise business a new breathing spell.

Big business would like to hear the same message. Labor would like to hear a message—but approached from a somewhat different angle.

Friends of the president predict his next appearance on the air will be temperate in nature—but that he still will demand the legislation he proposed last October as a keystone to national recovery. These friends say his next "fireside chat" will follow the basic patterns of the last two.

'Pirate' Bomb Sinks Second British Ship

New Violence Outbreak In Mediterranean to Bolster Guard.

(By International News Service)

LONDON—Causing Great Britain to consider plans for a naval blockade of Majorca, two Spanish insurgent planes bombed and sank the 1,387-ton British freighter Alcira off Barcelona today.

The crew of 25 men and an officer appointed by the International Non-Intervention committee were saved by a Spanish fishing smack.

The new outbreak of Mediterranean piracy occurred only a few days after the British freighter Endymion was torpedoed and sunk with a loss of 11 lives and served to increase British anger to the point of apoplexy. The Alcira flew the British flag and the neutral emblem of the Non-Intervention patrol.

The new incident convinced British authorities that measures taken immediately after the Endymion sinking are insufficient to cope with piratical assaults on neutral shipping in the Mediterranean.

Consider Blockade.

As a consequence, members of the government and the high naval command discussed the possibility of sending a naval expeditionary force to blockade the island of Majorca in the Balearics.

The Nationalist submarines and airplanes held responsible for the attacks have been operating out of Palma, the Italian-controlled chief port of Majorca.

Official quarters in London immediately jumped to the conclusion that the attack on the Alcira was the defiant reply of Spain's rebel leader, General Francisco Franco, to measures taken by Britain as a result of the sinking of the Endymion.

The attack on the Alcira was regarded here as a drastic "nose-thumbing" by Spain's rebels at the British admiralty, which ordered British naval vessels in the Mediterranean to sink submerged Nationalist submarines found in Mediterranean trade routes and patrol lanes without warning.

BUNNY CATS

Sophie Mothers Queer Kittens That Look Like Rabbits.

ARMONK, N. Y.—(U.P.)—Armonk residents looked askance today at Sophie, a black cat.

Sophie went on a three months' trip into the woods, and returned with a litter, which wasn't unusual in itself.

What made the circumstances questionable was the unusual appearance of two of the kittens, Bunny and Blackie. They bear astonishing resemblance to rabbits.

Bunny has the forelegs, chest, teeth, ears and claws of a cat, but its back is high like a rabbit's, and it has long rear legs and hops. Blackie hops, too, and has a short, fuzzy tail. Both like carrots and lettuce.

Ernest Sapey, manager of a cat shelter, called them "rabcats."

Captured In $100,000,000 Lottery Raid

Hope Dare

J. Richard (Dixie) Davis

Two men described as heads of the $100,000,000 lottery racket left by the late "Dutch" Schultz, were arrested in a Philadelphia apartment by detectives who followed the trail of a red-headed showgirl. One of the men was J. R. (Dixie) Davis, attorney for Schultz who was shot down in a Newwark, N. J., restaurant two years ago. The girl, released on $2,500 bail as a suspicious person, was Hope Dare, alias Rose Richer, who appeared in a Broadway production, "Life Begins at 8:40." The second man was George Weinberg. Bonds for Davis who has been a fugitive since 1937, and Weinberg, were set at $300,000 each, highest ever set in Philadelphia.

4 GET $3,000 LOOT IN BANK

Columbus Gunmen Scale 7-Foot Cages, Menace 8 Before Get-Away.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS—Running into the Hilltop branch of the Ohio National bank and vaulting cashier's cages seven feet high, four armed bandits robbed the bank of nearly $3,000 today.

While two of the men held four customers and four employes against the wall at the point of guns, their accomplices forced C. G. Wilcox, manager, to walk to the vault with them while they scooped about $100 in silver and pennies into a canvas bag.

Then the men cleaned out two cashiers' cages, but did not rifle a third cage.

The bank is directly across the street from the First Federal Savings and Loan company, which was robbed of $2,250 on Wednesday by three armed men.

Police said they believed the same gang staged both holdups because one of the bandits in each of the robberies was about five feet, four inches tall.

H. G. Deems, secretary of the loan company, reported the latest holdup to police after he saw one of the bandits run out of the bank with a bag in one hand and a gun in the other.

Helen E. Tannehill, assistant to Deems, and Miss Margaret Fletcher, a clerk, told police they saw two men come out of the bank. One wore a white mask and the other's face was covered with a black mask. Both carried guns, the women said.

'Cy' Gatton, Raconteur of Famed 'Tall Stories', Dies

Well-Known Richland County Fruit Farmer Stricken On Farm Ancestors Settled In 1812.

High on the hills at Gatton Rocks on the farm that his grandfather cut from the wilderness 126 years ago, Cyrus Miller Gatton, well known fruit farmer and Richland county's most famous raconteur, died at 7:45 a. m. today. He had been in ill health for a year, and seriously ill for a month.

With his death there passes from Richland county history a lovable character who had endeared himself to hundreds of persons all over the state, and whose "tall tales" brought celebrities to his door and who created legends that will live for years after his passing.

Among his friends was Lowell Thomas, radio commentator and writer, who enlisted Mr. Gatton, known as "Cy," as a charter member in his "Tall Story" club.

Created 'Wildcat Holler' Legend.

For many years he was much sought after as an entertainer and his tall stories kept banquet guests all over this section of the state in stitches. He created a legend of "Wildcat Holler," the lonely territory back of his home, which is now a part of the Roy Dickson orchards, and of "Sour Kate's" house. The latter was once a real two-story building, but because of his stories woven around it, it was gradually demolished, piece by piece, for souvenirs until not even a nail remains. This was the basis of many stories he told to Boy Scouts, in whom he was greatly interested.

Some Founded on Facts.

Some of his fantastic stories were actually founded on facts. Years ago when Halley's comet was a sensation, Cy Gatton went to the squatters in Wildcat Holler and told them such fearsome stories that they "got religion" and the women stopped smoking and chewing because he told them that would be "chalked up against them" when the comet came.

One of the stories which always

LIMIT LOADS

Commissioners Issue Order to Save County Roads.

As a protective measure for Richland county's roads, badly damaged by weather conditions, county commissioners today had placed a weight limit of six tons on trucks on county-maintained routes.

The six-ton limit is for vehicles with pneumatic tires. Vehicles equipped with solid tires will be limited to four and a half tons. The limit includes both the weight of the vehicle and the load.

Strict enforcement of the act by Sheriff E. P. Long and his deputies will be requested, County Engineer Howard C. Sword said. Violators will be subject to a $50 fine.

Most county routes have suffered from the rapid temperature changes and the large amount of moisture in the earth this winter Sword explained. The load limit will be effective until warmer weather permits repair work on the roads, he said.

HOLLYWOOD — (U.P.) — Constance Bennett had a sweet smile today for the hard-boiled judge who bawled her out for trying to be an actress in court. He later awarded her $35,000 in ruling on a contract for a picture she never made.

The judge is Charles S. Burnell, who interrupted the actress on the witness stand the other day, reminded her she was not a movie star to the court, just a garden variety witness, and told her "so just sit there and look beautiful."

SENATOR HURT

Searchers Find One of 4 Who Plunged Through Ice.

ALGONAC, Mich. —(U.P.)— The body of Carl M. Vincent, 50, one of four persons in an automobile which plunged through the ice of Lake St. Clair Sunday, was recovered with grappling hooks.

Vincent's wife, Alfreda, 52, and Mr. and Mrs. John Edmunston of Columbus, O., still were missing today. The two couples set out together Sunday for the Vincent's cabin on Dickinson island.

NAMES BENNETT

Davey Appoints Youngstown Man For Appeals Court Post.

COLUMBUS—(AP) — James Eugene Bennett of Youngstown was named to the seventh district court of appeals today to succeed James W. Roberts, who died Sept. 10.

City's Debt, Million and Half 10 Years Ago, Cut 60 Per Cent

A reduction of 60 per cent in the bonded indebtedness of the city of Mansfield that 10 years ago totaled more than a million and a half dollars was shown in figures compiled today by City Auditor Paul L. Kelley.

The figures show that outstanding bonds which totaled $1,575,400 in 1929, have been reduced in the past 10 years to $705,275, even in the face of a $225,000 bond issue three years ago. Final maturity date on existing bonds is 1951.

While the figures show that at the present rate of debt retirement, Mansfield would be a debt free city 13 years hence, Kelley pointed out that "this is highly improbable."

"It is only to be expected that additional obligations will be contracted within the next 13 years," he added.

The city's general bonded indebtedness which 10 years ago totaled $1,062,350 has been reduced to $618,575 as of Jan. 1, 1938. Included in this figure is a $200,000 bond issue voted for the contsruction of the new sewage disposal plant that was placed in operation last March. Another $25,000 in bonds also was issued for the development of the city's water supply in the Maxwell field.

The figures showed that waterworks revenue bonds, paid from collections from the water department, which totaled $234,000 in 1929, have been reduced to $62,000, with the final payment to be made in 1942.

Special assessment bonds expiring in 1941 now total $24,700 as compared with $279,050 outstanding indebtedness 10 years ago.

REHIRING OF SEWAGE PLANT EXPERT URGED

Mayor to Submit Plan to City Council, Hopes to Increase Effciency of System.

HOLDS UP FINAL PAYMENT

$6,000 Due Contractors Withheld Until Difficulties Are Straightened Out.

Mayor Claude M. Hunter announced today that he would recommend to city council the rehiring of a technical engineer to supervise the operation of Mansfield's $300,000 sewage plant.

At the same time he said the final payment due the contractor who built the plant, amounting to $6,000, would be withheld until mechanical difficulties were straightened out and the plant is "acceptable" to the city.

Confers With Engineer.

His action followed a conference yesterday with George B. Sowers of Cleveland, consulting engineer on the project.

Sowers met with the mayor after the latter received a report from the state health board in which it criticized operations of the plant. The report submitted by Fred H. Waring, chief engineer, was based on the findings of Bruce McDill, state health board engineer who made an inspection tour of the plant Jan. 26.

Calls In Operator.

Hunter said he was undecided what action would be taken on the state board's recommendation that an "experienced sewage plant engineer" be employed to operate the plant. J. P. Sotherland, operating engineer at the plant since it was placed in service last March, was in conference with Hunter throughout the morning.

Hunter said he had called Sotherland "to go over the report" with him.

Sotherland has charged that

PROBES CRASH

Army Board Seeks to Learn Why Big Test Plane Fell.

DAYTON—(AP)—A board of inquiry scheduled an investigation today into the crash of a big army test plane similar to the one with which experiments in substratosphere flying have been conducted.

The eight-passenger, low-wing, all metal (Lockheed) ship undershot Wright field by a quarter of a mile late yesterday while attempting to land after a few minutes in flight, injuring First Lieut. Paul E. Shanahan, 33, of Mount Vernon, Ill., and Capt. Edward H. White, 36, of Fort Wayne, Ind.

The condition of both was reported today as good at the Miami Valley hospital.

Field officers said the fact that the fliers attempted to land the ship downwind indicated that they had experienced trouble aloft.

Doctors On Constant Duty as Simone Simon Nears Crisis

HOLLYWOOD—Two physicians alternated today at the bedside of the girl with the trickiest name, the fieriest temper and the most unusual eccentricities in Hollywood—Simone Simon, seriously ill of bronchial pneumonia.

Before nightfall they expected a crisis in her condition.

Miss Simon, dimpled French star, collapsed last October on a 20th Century-Fox sound stage from bronchitis and was rushed to a hospital with a fever of 101. Ten days later she apparently had recovered fully.

Physicians reported today that her temperature was 103 degrees.

For the last three weeks, the 24-year-old girl who has provided Hollywood with more than her share of legends, has been working in "Josette," with a cold which became worse day by day. Wednesday night she went home to bed. Yesterday she felt so much worse that Drs. Max W. Bay and Harry H. Blond were summoned. They removed her to Cedars of Lebanon hospital in an ambulance.

Although gravely concerned over her condition, they indicated that her youth and vitality meant much in her favor. They maintained, nevertheless, a constant watch at her bedside.

BLOWN OUT OF STORAGE TANK IN GAS EXPLOSION

Believe Victim Lighted Match When Heater Drying Out 18-Foot Wooden Vat Went Out; Concussion Rocks Frank & Son Plant.

Blown out of an empty 5,000 gallon storage tank at the M. Frank and Son brewery, 121 North Franklin avenue, at 8:10 this morning, Samuel Barth, 50, of East Mansfield died in an ambulance on the way to General hospital.

The explosion, which occurred in the basement, was believed to have been caused by a lighted match. There was no fire. Damage was estimated at $500.

Fellow employes who rushed to the basement when a blast shook the building, found Barth, who had been working alone, staggering from the room, his face covered with blood.

An ambulance was summoned, but hospital attaches said he was dead upon arrival.

Barth, who had been employed as a cellarman at the brewery for the past two years, was working in the basement curing one of the 18-foot wooden vats, officials of the firm said.

The curing process, they explained, was the drying of the tank preparatory to filling it with liquid. A gas heater had been placed in the inside of the tank yesterday to dry the lining and brewery officials expressed the belief that Barth had crawled partly in the opening to light a heater that had gone out during the night.

Blows Out Bottom of Tank.

The explosion was of such force that the entire bottom of the tank was blown out. Windows in an adjoining room were shattered and glass blown 25 feet from the building.

Employes said they found the gas in the pipe lines running to the huge vat still turned on after the blast, which led them to believe that the fire had gone out during the night.

Barth was a lifelong resident of Mansfield, having been born and raised here. He lived with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Barth, North street, East Mansfield.

He is survived by his parents; four brothers, John, jr., William and Daniel, all of Mansfield, and Carl of Cleveland; five sisters, Mrs. John Beer and Mrs. Clarence Rist of Mansfield, Mrs. John Becker, Mary and Alice, all of Cleveland.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Monday at Wappner's funeral home in charge of the Apostolic Christian church. The body will remain at the home until Monday.

4TH SMALLPOX CASE REPORTED

Madison High Cage Game With Butler Called Off as Precautionary Step.

Despite a fourth case of smallpox reported today in Mifflin township, Dr Roy C. Rehder, city-county health commissioner, said there was no immediate danger of an epidemic and that schools would not be closed unless a further spread of the disease struck the classrooms.

He strongly urged all school children attending the Madison township high school and their parents to be immunized at once unless they had been successfully vaccinated within the last five years.

"Nurses are making a regular check of all persons who have had contact with those now under quarantine and urging immunization," Rehder said.

Meanwhile, Olan LeRue, superintendent of the Madison township high school, said that the scheduled basketball game between Madison and Butler which was to have been played at Butler tonight had been cancelled.

The case placed under quarantine by the health authorities today was reported as Leo Nell, of Mifflin township. The attending physician reported that Nell had been taken ill Jan. 26 and the illness diagnosed yesterday as smallpox.

Those placed under quarantine yesterday, all adults were Bryan and Shirley Boals of Mifflin township and Wayne E. Miller, 67 Dawson avenue, principal of the Madison school. Another case was under suspicion by health authorities today, Rehder said

NIAGARA FALLS —(INS)— Daring workmen today ventured out upon the frozen Niagara river in an effort to cut up fallen "honeymoon bridge" before it was swept onward into Lake Ontario.

WAITS SENTENCE

Cleveland Police Officer 5th Convicted on Bribe Charges.

CLEVELAND —(INS)— Fifth police officer brought to trial here in two years on graft charges—and the fifth to be convicted, Sergeant James E. Price awaited sentence today on charges of accepting protection bribes in prohibition days.

A common pleas jury of seven men and five women deliberated only an hour and 10 minutes before reporting a guilty verdict against Price, the father of eight children and member of the police force for 30 years.

Judge Lee E. Skeel deferred sentence until a motion for a new trial is heard next Thursday. He faces a possible one-to-10 year sentence on each of three counts.

Seven former bootleggers testified against Price in the course of the trial.

5 MINERS DIE

8 Others Injured While Being Lowered Into Shaft.

COPPER CLIFF, Ont.—(INS)—Five young miners were killed and eight others were injured today while being lowered in a new shaft at Levack mine.

The accident occurred when the carrier in which the men were being lowered hit an obstruction.

GANG VICTIM

New Yorker Found Slain In Rear Seat of Auto.

NEW YORK—(AP)—The partly dressed body of a man who apparently had been taken for a gangland "ride" was found sprawled on the rear seat of a parked automobile in West 18th street today.

The victim, about 28, had been shot through the left cheek.

SURVIVORS OF TUSCANIA MEET

Mansfielder Goes to Reunion of Veterans Rescued From Torpedoed Transport.

One of the American soldiers who was rescued after an American transport was torpedoed in the Irish sea, Feb. 5, 1918, L. Kent Rummel of Mansfield leaves tonight for Chicago to attend a reunion of survivors of the Tuscania tragedy.

The first reunion of the survivors was held five years ago in Chicago. Rummel has not attended any of the annual reunions since then.

A strong bond unites the men who survived the tragedy which sent 267 of their buddies to the bottom of the Irish sea early in the evening on the day the American transport sailed into range of the German U-boat 77 off the Irish coast. It was the only American transport sunk during the World war.

The Tuscania went down within three and a half hours from the time the German shell struck her. Two large lifeboats loaded with soldiers and members of the crew failed to withstand the buffeting by the heavy seas and sunk. The boat in which the Mansfield man took refuge was picked up by the Irish patrol boat, "Elfking."

At each reunion of the survivors greetings are received from Capt. Wilhelm Meyer, retired commander of the German army which sent the transport to its watery grave.

APPEALS CASE

Bobby Jones Continues Fight For $50,000 Tax Rebate.

MACON, Ga. — (INS)—Bobby Jones has carried to federal court here his complaint against the government asking refunds of more than $50,000 in income tax payments he contends were paid in excess of the amounts due.

Separate claims for monies totaling approximately $52,000 have been filed by Jones who was present at a recent hearing before Federal Judge Bascom Deaver.

The suit is based on income received by the "grand slam" golf king when he was employed in 1931 by Warner Brothers to make a moving picture short.

Bobby contends income payments were on the basis of a $101,000 payment for the movie producers, a sum which he states was never collected.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1938.

Constant horn-blowing is annoying—either by a motorist or a politician.

Ancient Athens, "the first experiment in democracy," blew up from arguing too much.

It is rumored that "Gone With the Wind," one of the newer of the old classics, is soon to be filmed. This should not be confused with the island of Manacura after the "Hurricane."

Many Men of Many Minds.

WHILE there is the utmost sympathy with the plight and problems of "little business," it may be doubted if much of anything was accomplished by the rather turbulent conference of "small business men" that ended in Washington yesterday.

Some idea of the magnitude of the whole problem may be gained by a study of the widely divergent plans proposed at the conference and the absence of any clear-cut proposal that regarded the interests of the people as a whole.

As seen by "small business" it is important to establish a procedure to facilitate loans for use in small business enterprises, with the suggestion that such loans be made through local financial institutions and insured by the government. Stringent banking regulations were criticized as making it difficult for small businesses to secure loans for production purposes—yet it was laxity in loan-making that brought disastrous banking experiences only a few years ago.

Some worthwhile proposals may come out of the conference, in the form of committee reports, although it may be doubted if any improvement will be made on the ten proposals previously offered in the senate, a digest of these being:

1. The capital gains tax and the undistributed profits tax should be thoroughly revised at once, so as to encourage the normal flow of savings into productive enterprise.

2. A start should be made toward balancing the federal budget, in order that public credit may be preserved and fears which deter investment, ended.

3. The constitutional guarantees of the right of the worker to work, and of the owner of property to its possession, must be preserved and enforced.

4. Government should stay out of fields which belong in the realm of private industry—and if the government does propose to compete in any field, due notice should be given so that private investment may avoid it.

5. The competitive system must be maintained—as against either private or government monopoly, and business' right to a reasonable profit must be guaranteed.

6. Private credit must be preserved—and that means that the nation's collateral, on which all credit depends, must be preserved.

7. There must be an assurance that taxes will not be further increased, and that they will be reduced at the earliest possible time.

8. States' rights, home rule and local self-government must be vigorously maintained, unless proven definitely inadequate.

9. The needy must be aided under a system which is non-political and non-partisan.

10. Lastly, the nation should rely, in the future, as in the past, upon the American system of private initiative and enterprise.

Too Many Small Radio Stations.

LIKE some other evils that develop out of things that are fundamentally good, cluttering the air with mediocre programs of conflicting small radio stations is among the nuisances that must eventually be eliminated if radio is to increase its field of real usefulness.

It was apparently assumed, for a time, that every small city—to be "up-to-date"—must have a radio station, just as was tried out unsuccessfully in Mansfield some years ago.

Such experiments clearly demonstrated that small-city local stations tend to monopolize almost the entire dial and interfere with reception from a number of the large stations carrying high-class programs.

The listening public will be better served by a reduction, rather than an increase, of small-city radio stations.

Thinly Veiled Propaganda.

A MEMBER of the American Philatelic society has received a form letter from a Japanese stamp collector with whom he has never corresponded. He thinks other stamp fans may have been equally favored. The Japanese letter is friendly but hardly intimate. It is printed in English and, although it begins "My dear fellow philatelist," is merely a discussion of the situation in China and a defense of Japan's present activities there.

"We Japanese," the author of the letter says, "have retained an affectionate friendship for the Chinese people for more than a thousand years. Even now, despite the complicated political situation, our ultimate aim is to secure a serene and lasting peace in the Orient."

It all looks like "subtle propaganda" to the American, and doubtless it is so intended. But the adjective should be "naive."

Alcohol Test Holds In Court.

ALCOHOLISM is no longer a matter of guess work. A precedent was set in Buffalo the other day when an intoxicated motorist was convicted by the evidence of his own blood stream. A young doctor, by scientific analysis, determined that the defendant's blood, when he was arrested, showed a content of nearly one-third of 1 per cent of alcohol.

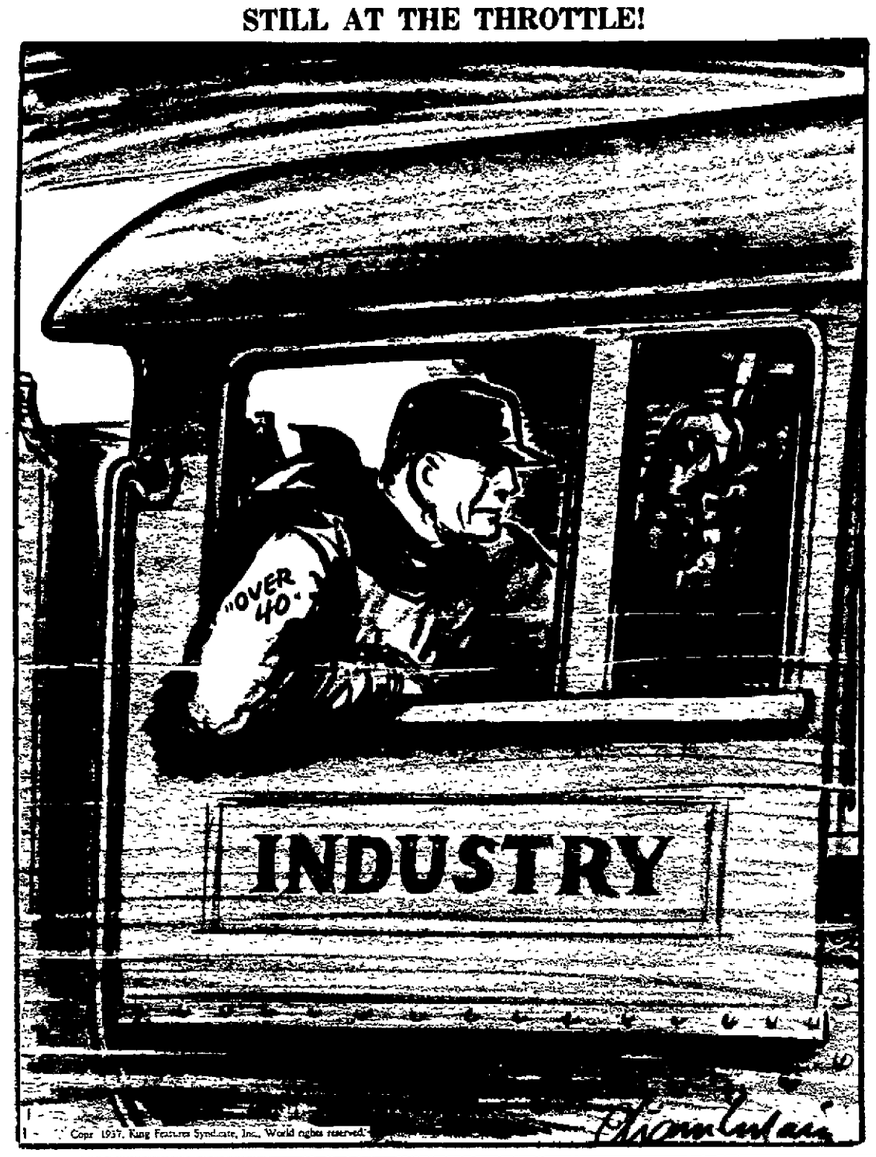
This might seem a small matter, but the doctor explained that it represented more than 10 drinks of 100-proof whisky taken in quick succession, a quantity that would certainly incapacitate a man for safe driving. The judge held that such evidence was permissible and the scientific-minded jury accepted it.

There will probably be scientific tests of this sort used more and more in such cases.

Mussolini advises his people to "live dangerously"—yet Italy has only one automobile to each 103 inhabitants.

One unpleasant thing about insomnia is that it seldom reaches through to getting-up time.

STILL AT THE THROTTLE!



Business Held More Efficient Than Government

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—A reader raises this point:

"Do you really believe that business is any more efficient than the New Deal?"

Yes, I do believe so.

But, if I believed the New Deal to be more efficient than business, I still do not think I would be paying much of a compliment to the New Deal, for business does not seem to me to be efficient enough to be hard to beat, by even a very small modicum of efficiency.

AS STEWART SEES IT

Business, if efficient at all, certainly ought to be sufficiently so as to keep a country's economic status reasonably stable — to maintain tolerably good times as a regular thing, and also to keep them improving gradually.

It hasn't done it.

As far back as we can remember we have had about three major depressions per century, with one or two minor depressions per interval.

WHERE BUSINESS FAILS

We have had intervening booms, too, but they have been as dangerous as their succeeding slumps have been painful.

Yet business has not been able to recognize a boom as a boom while said boom actually was booming. We had a post-war boom. It lasted so long that it puzzled me. My idea was that we should have had a terrible, prolonged depression after so terrific a conflict.

I got an interview on the subject with Herbert Hoover, then secretary of commerce. I took him to be pre-eminently a business expert. He assured me that that thing was not a boom; that we were living in a new age of the world; that what I called a boom was, in reality, our modern "normalcy". We know what followed before the end of his presidential term.

Since then I never have had much confidence in a business judgment.

A CONTRAST

Now, contrast business' inefficiency with government's inefficiency!

Business does have a certain authority about it. A business boss gives orders and they are obeyed or somebody gets fired. A governmental boss gives orders and his subordinate, if he has political influence, may defy them successfully. All sorts of confusion results, naturally.

My querist did not ask, "Is business more efficient than government?"

He asked, "Is businesss more efficient than the New Deal?"

"CHURNED UP"

The New Deal now, however, IS government.

That is to say, it is the executive end of government. It likewise is getting to be the judicial end of government. But it is not the legislative end of it. Indeed, it is, more and more, losing control of the legislative end.

The whole thing is churned up, in short—and a churned up condition does not make for efficiency.

BUSINESS MORE EFFICIENT

It is an old story that a despotism, it a good one, AS a despotism, is efficient.

American business is not a first-class despotism, but it tries to approximate it. I think that New Dealerism, trying in the same direction, is not succeeding so well.

Accordingly, what is the conclusion?

Business, at least, is cohesive.

Democracy dissipates itself.

I hate to say so, but I think that business will turn out to be the more efficient of the two, in the natural course of events—not in the far geological future, but for the next few generations.

Listen, World!

Don't Outreach Yourself.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THAT old axiom—"Hitch your wagon to a star"—I'll wager it has been responsible for more Inferiority Complexes than anything else on earth.

Countless lives have been ruined by ambitions which outreached their capacity.

This writing ambition, for instance—

Wonder how many homes have been smashed because some really good dish washer decided to be Willa Cather?

As for the yen to make the flickers? Huh!

Look and weep at the Awful Examples in Hollywood.

Nor are the downright failures the most awful specimens. It's the ones who get a foothold—and never get anything more—that suffer the keenest anguish. For they won't go back and they can't go forward—and they spend their lives in a misery of maladjustment.

NOTHING CAN MANGLE YOUR SELF-CONFIDENCE WORSE OR SUBJECT YOU TO MORE FAILURE OR HUMILIATION THAN TO TACKLE A JOB FOR WHICH YOU ARE NOT NOW AND NEVER CAN BE FITTED

Yet, yearly, thousands of graduates from business colleges and universities surge into just such jobs.

They're bright, young people.

They want to be famous. Then why shouldn't they be famous? Other people have made good? Why can't they?

THE SIMPLE ANSWER IS THAT THEY HAVEN'T THE MAKINGS.

AND NO MATTER HOW WILLING YOU ARE, OR HOW HARD YOU WORK, YOU CANNOT SUCCEED IN THE STARRY ARTS UNLESS YOU ALSO HAVE THE MYSTERIOUS WHEREWITHAL WITHIN OUR OWN SPIRIT.

But no one has given them this answer.

So, these ambitious young people, turn from the "mediocre" tasks for which they are fitted and in which they might succeed and proceed to crash the heights

Then what happens? They get a look in Some small job which puts them within the magic circle. And there they stick. They haven't the talent to go ahead. Nor, as a matter of fact, have they any conception what "going ahead" means.

THEY ARE NOT ACTUALLY IN LOVE WITH ACHIEVEMENT PER SE, THEY ARE IN LOVE WITH THE GLAMOUR WHICH SURROUNDS ACHIEVEMENT. THEIR SOULS ARE NOT HUNGRY. THEIR IMAGINATIONS ARE AFLAME AND THEIR EGOTISM IS ITCHING—WHICH IS QUITE A DIFFERENT MATTER, AND SO THEY HAVE NO CONCEPTION OF THE REAL DIFFICULTIES OR REWARDS OF THAT ART THEY SEEK TO ENTER.

But of these things they are ignorant. Nor do they seek wisdom. They only seek a thrill.

But instead they find disappointment and humiliation. They are given tasks beyond their capacity. they are constantly forced into competition with people whose record makes their own look like a plugged nickel. And so they are secretly haunted by a growing sense of frustration and failure. Whereas, had they chosen a career suited to their ability, they could have known the pride and surety of success.

DON'T HITCH YOUR WAGON TO A STAR THAT IS HIGHER THAN YOUR OWN CAPACITY!

Fill your life as full of tall adventure as you possibly can. Encourage your own desire for the fine things of life.

BUT DON'T OUTREACH YOURSELF.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

"A Thorn in Your Side."

People who do not profess erudite or learned conversation do constantly in modern speech refer to a person or thing that is irritating, a perpetual source of annoyance, as being a thorn in their side.

The original form of the phrase is "a thorn in the flesh," and it comes to use from the Bible It is the Second Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Corinthians, that we find

"And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure."

Keeping Step

Guesses on Future Price Course.

—By LESLIE EICHEL

WALL STREET believes that the Roosevelt administration will adopt some sort of "visible" inflation after certain price regulatory laws and anti-monopoly measures have been passed (if they can be). This may be back of the efforts at the moment to get price regulatory measures under way. Such measures have preceded inflation abroad.

It may be termed "regulated inflation"—if there can be such thing.

(Besides which, of course, the measures are needed in capitalistic, competitive nations, or "dog will eat dog" and nobody will be left, liberals say.)

The difference in the United States lies in the endeavor, by the government, to keep wages up. This has been the effort, unsuccessfully in France, too. But in the totalitarian countries, there has been deflation in wages (in return for "security") in an effort to hold down all costs despite an inflationary spiral.

Government-controlled credit and money in nearly every nation in the world is for a while reversing the trend of natural economic laws—but will prices not go crashing down after each nation has eaten up its capital?

"Normally, it is estimated that it requires from three to five billions of new money to keep the wheels of industry moving. These are the amounts tht private capital has been putting up in good business years, prior to government deficit financing. It is a large total for the government to attempt to swing without assistance and without injury to its credit. While it undoubtedly can be done through strictly inflationary means once or twice, there is no continuity to such a performance and the investor has to shift his tactics from bullish to bearish and back again with great agility.

"A sounder reason for buying stocks would be one where there was real evidence of business-government co-operation. The first requisite to this would be a fair method of taxation where the penalties against success are not so great as to destroy the incentive to take the risk. Presumably this would also require a closer aligument between government expenditures and receipts, for continued deficits also prevent a return of confidence in the long pull."

INFLATION:

The wall Street Journal adds: "There is a much simpler way to inflate than to lend money to small business concerns that have been managed so badly or unfortunately that they cannot raise capital in the open market.

"The dollar can be devalued a little further without the necessity of passing new laws, the 'profits' resulting from the last devaluation can be spent or greenbacks can be issued. But at the same time the complementary method of inflating by lending capital to risky enterprises, attaching a government 'guarantee' or 'insurance' to it and casting it into a private banking system that previously rejected it because the loans appeared unsecured has a side to it that bears upon the stock market. The only drawback in this connection is that private depositors may not remain unconcerned for long if they see too much of this 'guaranteed' and 'insured' paper drifting into the banking system from a revolving fund that has as its base government deficits.

"More and more, though, the tendecy is to flirt with inflation and the president himself in the past week mentioned 'other means of creating purchasing power' if conditions fail to develop satisfactorily this spring. Specifically, the threat was conditioned upon any business attempt to reduce wages but it may be assumed that if wages are upheld and normal purchasing power still fails to improve the 'other means' may be given more attention."

Timely Editorial

Deadly Contempt.

With real winter setting in here, there and elsewhere in this country, the newspapers are carrying items indicating how deadly is the contempt of kerosene that familiarity with it breeds. If people in the rural districts and small towns know anything at all, it is that kerosene is highly inflammable and explosive. Yet day after day we read that one or more members of a family died horribly because kerosene exploded while the effort was being made to hasten a balky fire with it. Some expert observers of the human race insist that carelessness is the quality really at the bottom of most of our accidents and mishaps, and the role kerosene plays annually in augmenting the fatality lists is evidence on their side. At any rate, let it be noted that kerosene is dangerous stuff and must be handled with the utmost care if tragedy is not to come of it.—Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

You and Your Nation's Affairs

Wages and Unemployment.

By WALTER E. SPAHR, Professor of Economics, New York University.

Hearings are being held in Washington to determine the causes of the present large unemployment. The essential facts which provide the answer can be had rather easily if Congressmen and others are willing to look at them.

But people wish to avoid these facts because the evidence does not conform to their wishful thinking.

One of the principal causes of unemployment will be found in the relatively high and rigid wage scales which have been maintained during periods of business recession. The other principal cause will be found in the government's continued harassing of business enterprise. Only the former of these causes will be considered here

Because of the human factor involved in wage questions, the tendency has been to assume and to insist that wages are not prices and that the forces of supply and demand operate differently where wages, as distinguished from other prices, are concerned.

The simple facts in the matter are that wages are prices: that wages, like other prices, are determined by the forces of supply and demand: and that raising wage rates or maintaining high rates in the face of the same or a declining demand increases unemployment.

There is ample evidence that the present and other periods of great unemployment rest upon a failure of the fixers of artificially high wage rates to face these facts. Unemployment and its accompanying distress provide a fertile field for demagogues who have been the direct cause of much of labor's suffering. The demagogue proclaims his sympathy for labor, then proceeds to do the very thing that increases unemployment!

This sort of thing has been going on for several years in this country, but perhaps has reached a new high since the crash in 1929. It has been a great tragedy for the wage earner and for the nation. Politicians and labor leaders, who are slick, or ruthless, or unscrupulous, or ignorant, have misled labor while proclaiming themselves friends of the worker. They have ridden into power on the backs of labor, have maintained unemployment at an inexcusably high level, and have hindered recovery and impaired the national well-being.

The hope of labor and the general public lies in Congressmen being willing to look at evidence and the economics of the unemployment problem, and to throttle demagogic labor politics.

A few facts should make clear the economics of the matter. In the depression 1920-1921, wage rates were reduced rapidly and drastically. Prices of goods also declined from May and June, 1920, to the fall of 1921. The low point of production in basic industries was in April and July, 1921; by May, 1923, production had risen sharply. Factory employment was at a peak in March, 1920; at a low in June, 1921, and back almost to its former peak by March, 1923. It will be seen, therefore, that recovery was rapid.

Following the crash of 1929, wage rates, for "humanitarian" reasons, were maintained with great rigidity, and this was one of the principal causes of the huge unemployment which followed. Using, for purposes of comparison, the figure of 100 for the rates of 1914, hourly manufacturing wage rates were 240 for the fourth quarter of 1929. Again using 100 for 1914 as a basis of comparison, the figures for the four quarters of 1930 were 240, 240, 240 and 236, respectively. On the same basis of comparison the quarters of 1931 were 233, 231, 229, and 221. Respective quarters for 1932 were 213, 205, 196, 190.

All readers will recall the distressing amount of unemployment of 1931. But note this: After three years of sharp business recession, wage rates in manufacturing industries were as high as they were at the end of 1921 with a price level far below the 1921 level, and with productive activity at 56 in July, 1932, as compared with 64 in July, 1921. Wage rates declined in one year, from the third quarter of 1920 to the fourth quarter of 1921, by 22 per cent. For one year after the fourth quarter of 1929, the decline was only 1.7 per cent; from the fourth quarter of 1929 to the fourth quarter of 1931—two full years—wage rates declined only 8 per cent. And notice the consequence: The index of factory employment for the year 1932 was 62 as contrasted with an average of 82 for 1921.

Professor Jacob Viner, of the University of Chicago, once said of this situation: "President Hoover would have rendered a service instead of a disservice to labor if instead of pledging employers to maintain wage rates he had obtained from them a pledge to maintain their total employment with freedom to reduce wages as circumstances made necessary. . . All that is guaranteed by wage rates higher than employers can afford to pay and still give employment to the available supply of labor is unemployment. . . . High wages may and often do reduce rather than increase the size of the total payroll."

The Roosevelt Administration has carried on and magnified this mistake made by the Hoover Administration, and, as a consequence, unemployment has reached appalling figures and has persisted—all in the name of humanity! The situation in 1937, and now, is merely a part of this same picture. It is one consequence of throwing economic principles overboard and of demagogues riding and leading labor into a state of increasing distress.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

HOW MAN IS SAVED: For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast.—Ephesians 2:8, 9.

McIntyre's New York Day by Day

THOUGHTS while strolling: For exquisite phrasing that sounds so casual, my vote to Ellen Glasgow. In a fog George Creel could pass for ex-King Alfonso. Captain Achmed Abdullah is a runner-up for George Arliss in expert handling of a monocle.

Goody, goody department: Lynn Fontanne chews gum, too. What the theater needs is a few of the Belasco, Clyde Fitch and Bronson Howard touches. Put a spade-shaped beard on Louis Calhern and you have one of the ex-grand dukes of Russia. Heaven help us note: Peter Arno has a tweed Tuxedo.

Add impossibilities: Finding a cop in Central park, the new hold-up center. Who remembers when Frank Buck's picture was not on all the billboards? Every time Noel Coward publicity seems becalmed, somebody prints that one about his approaching knighthood.

Warren Pershing is a ringer for his illustrious dad. J. P. McEvoy and Morris Gest could trade hats without many noticing it. Most successful of the society singers: Eve Symington. She knows when to quit. Enzo Fiermonte sounds like a buzz saw hitting a knot. Study in dignity: Bernard Baruch.

Mrs. Buggs Baer and son "Buggsie." Tony Canzoneri is one fighter who looks as though he had been fighting and not drinking pink tea. Truly a game little guy! Last of the vanishing courtesies: A Cartier salesman bows a lady all the way to her waiting limousine.

Crack newspaper artists go in for home building in a big way. The greatest splurge, of course, is in the moated castle of Bob Ripley's in Connecticut. Then the town house of Rube Goldberg, nudging the Schwab mansion near the drive. And John T. McCutcheon's estate on a Pacific island. Segar is building a $100,000 hacienda near Los Angeles from profits of his Popeye strip. Cliff McBride has a similar establishment at Altadena. So it goes.

Eyvind Earle, son of the once headlined love romanticist, Ferdinand Pinney Earle, is showing the artistic flair of his father. Recently he began a bicycle trip from Los Angeles to New York with a painting and camp outfit strapped to his back. He paid his way gypsying along and had time to do the choicest scenes on the way, all of which were displayed at a New York exhibit. Young Earle is adept at desert scenes, particularly in the Mojave Valley.

Many de luxe hotels in mid-town have patrons who retain what are known as cocktail suites the year around — generally two or three rooms and used solely for giving cocktail parties, lunches or after-theater suppers. The reason for such seeming extravagance is the servant problem. A cock tail binge often throws a big home out of gear for dinner and after-theater affairs are likely to run till the wee hours — and servants these days won't stand for many of them. Also luncheons in the cocktail suites are handy to the theaters to which many guests go afterward. A few such suites rent as high as $10,000 a year.

After a careful inspection of the news pictures and photogravures of the society maids at Palm Beach and decorating the high chairs in various night clubs, my vote for youthful beauty and freshness goes to Eileen Stone, the hat-check and cigaret girl at El Morocco. If Ziegfeld were alive he would have had her long ago in the first line. Not only has she a dewy freshness but a regal stride suggesting Dolores and a way of moving about with eyes cast demurely down that stifles the usual pawing by drunks and bores. Indeed the entire front row of the old revue chorus could be easily recruited from the cigaret and hat check girls around town. There's one with a page boy bob at the Stork club who keeps many customers' eyes off their lady friends when she passes along.

I used to watch Dolores practise her pantherine glide at rehearsals on the Midnight Frolic Roof. For hours she would walk about the stage and dance floor with books balanced on her head—sometimes a half dozen. It reminded me how I used to follow the set of the bricks for several blocks on the way to school. So arduously did I follow them I suspect that is why I have a pie-footed walk today.

MAPS DRIVE FOR SANITATION IN LIQUOR PARLORS

Liquor Board Threatens to Revoke Permits If Owners Permit Filth.

(By International News Service)

CLEVELAND — The Ohio liquor control board served notice today it will launch an intensive campaign against unsanitary conditions in establishments operating under state beer and liquor permits.

Whenever such conditions are discovered, the permits will be revoked, Mrs. Edith McClure Patterson, board member from Dayton, said. She declared Ohio is "behind the times' in regulation of sanitary conditions.

Mrs. Patterson cited as an example one of the cases which came up during a three-day session of hte board here this week, that of George Lake, 304 North Tuscarawas street, Dover. Lake appeared before the board on charges of illegal possession of liquor and unsanitary conditions at his place of business.

'Highly Unsanitary.'

Liquor department inspectors described conditions in Lake's store, which operates under a 3.2 beer permit, as "highly unsanitary." Testimony showed that Dover has no statutes providing for strict regulation or inspection of such a place of business.

Lake testified that his place is being remodeled with a view to improve sanitary conditions. The board revoked his permit with the provision that if department agents find the conditions rectified within 30 days, Lake may appeal for a rehearing of his case.

Mrs. Patterson pointed to the campaigns conducted by Washington, D. C., Houston, Tex., and numberous other cities, to enforce sterilization of utensils, glasses and dishes. In comparison with other states, Ohio is behind the times in regulation of unsanitary conditions, she declared.

"Because many of our D-1 (3.2 beer) permits are in eating places where children eat and drink, it is very important that we enforce the sanitary laws of cleanliness," she said.

Social diseases, saliva borne, are transmitted easily under unsanitary conditions, she said, and there is especially great danger of trench mouth, influenza, the common cold, and communicable children's diseases with improper sterilization of glasses and dishes.

"In one place it was found," Mrs. Patterson stated, "that the bacteria count in the water was higher than would be found in sewage."

HANDKERCHIEF CAUSES KILLING

Donovan, Ex-Shortstop, Killed As Friend's Gun Goes Off.

NEW YORK—(INS)—A handkerchief that pulled a trigger was blamed today for the fatal shooting of Michael B. Donovan, 58, former shortstop of the old New York Yankees, by his best friend, Joseph A. Courtney, 52.

The two men, employed as guards by the Consolidated Edison company, were standing in the pay line. Courtney pulled his handkerchief from his hip pocket. In doing so the handkerchief became entangled with his gun. When he tried to disengage it, the weapon was discharged Donovan, standing in front of his friend, was struck and instantly killed by the bullet.

Police absolved Courtney.

PLANS HOLIDAY

Roosevelt Says He Might Make Trip To Hyde Park.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— President Roosevelt said today he might take a three-day holiday at Hyde Park, N. Y., over George Washington's birthday.

Tentative plans, he told reporters, call for him to leave Washington Feb. 19 for his Duchess county home and return here Feb. 24.

FIGHTS HORN'S ARREST ORDER

Purchasing Agent's Attorney Says He'll Make Case Test For Graft Inquiry.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—State Purchasing Agent Glen Horn faced today the second contempt citation voted by the senate's special investigating committee because he refused to answer questions without benefit of counsel.

His attorney, Clarence M. Addison, whom Horn said he had known for "a day or so," previously had been ordered ejected from the committee room, then invited to remain, but finally left of his own volition. To newspapermen he said:

"Let them cite him for contempt. Then we will see whether a legislative body has a right to conduct a criminal proceeding."

The contempt citation, which climaxed a stormy session yesterday, ordered Horn to stand trial before the bar of the senate at 2:30 p. m. next Tuesday.

Previously the committee had cited State Finance Director M. Ray Allison because he refused to relinquish certain records.

Addison had interrupted the hearing by objecting to certain questions on the grounds they did not directly concern any future appropriation the senate might vote.

After Horn refused to answer ensuing questions, Sen. Verner Metcalf (R-Washington) then offered the motion that the purchasing agent be cited for contempt and it was adopted unanimously.

Previously the committee sought to learn why a large amount of business was given to the Maher and North Coal company of Cleveland which, witnesses have testified, bought coal at the mine for 92 cents a ton and sold it to the state for $1.60.

Horn insisted that he did not know that certain firms were selling coal to Maher and North at 80 and 90 cents a ton and that the Cleveland company was passing it on to the state at a much higher price

SEEKS DELAY ON FILIBUSTER

Senator Glass To Request Action On Appropriation Bill.

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— Sen. Carter Glass, D., Va., plans to introduce a motion in the senate today to displace the Anti-Lynching bill with one of the pending appropriation bills.

Glass' motion was expected to follow a speech by Sen. William E. Borah, R., Idaho, who will attack the constitutionality of the controversial measure for the second time Borah's speech will be a reply to one made by Sen. Robert F Wagner, D., N. C., coauthor of the bill, yesterday. Wagner defended its legality as an "implied duty of the federal government."

The first definite move to lay aside the anti-lynching bill will come as the filibuster by southern senators against the proposed legislation reached its second month

DIVORCED, TRIES TO END HIS LIFE

Mervin Summers, 40, Shoots Self; Recovering In Hospital Today.

Less than 24 hours after his wife had been granted a divorce, Mervin Summers, 40, of 246 North Main street, was found lying near the Pennsylvania railroad tracks, south of Longview avenue with a self inflicted bullet wound in his chest.

Police Chief Meade K. Bates said the man had been found by a youth, who had heard the man call, "Call the police I'm shot."

Bates said the man had opened his shirt and placed the muzzle of the revolver, found on the scene, to his chest. One bullet was fired from the gun. Several cartriges and a note found in his pocket explained the suicide attempt, the chief said.

Scrawled in pencil on the back of a receipt were the words, "Talk to Byrl, she can explain this."

While Summers refused to talk when questioned at the hospital by police, Bates said, investigation disclosed that Byrl was his former wife who yesterday had been granted a divorce in common pleas court on the grounds of neglect and cruelty.

The court restored her maiden name, Byrl Hess and ordered Summers to pay $50 counsel fees and alimony of $5 a week for the next two years.

HURT IN CLASH

50 Injured In Street Rioting Near Bucharest.

BUCHAREST—(U.P.)—More than 50 members of the anti-Jewish iron guard and many policemen were injured last night in a riot at Ploesti, 40 miles north of Bucharest, dispatches said today.

Reports indicated that the iron guardists tried to march in military formation through the streets and attacked policemen who sought to interfere.

FORM 'LAUGH CLUB' TO COMBAT CURRENT BUSINESS RECESSION

SEATTLE — (AP) — Three "small business men" decided today what the country needs to do most about the recession is to "laugh it off."

They organized the National Laugh club and hope to establish laugh lodges throughout the country to sponsor a national laugh week.

Cyrus O Teeter, a furniture dealer, was elected president, and Robert O Jones, community newspaper publisher, ex-officio secretary.

"There's too much tension and moaning," Jones explained. "What the country needs more than anything else is more humor. We already have cheese weeks and prune weeks, but certainly a national laugh week is more important."

Teeter said congress would be asked to set aside a week for general laughter.

"And we'll not only laugh at the things we like to laugh at," he said, "we'll laugh at the things we usually grumble at."

As Teeter outlined laugh week plans, Seattle sniggers will have a slight flavor of criticism. Among things listed to be laughed about are:

1. Inequities of law and justice.
2. Taxes.
3. Unethical business
4. Scarcity-makes-prosperity theories
5. Anything else you don't like, provided it's upon a national scale.

The club's crest will be a Grade A grin, from ear to ear; its mascot will be Little Audrey (the girl who laughed and laughed—remember?) and the laugh week slogan will be "laugh it off."

WET WEEK-END

That's Forecast as Mercury Rises Above Normal.

A week-end of rain and above-normal temperatures is in prospect for the Mansfield area, forecasts indicated today.

With the mercury at 36 above zero at noon and the average reading for the past 24 hours at 10 degrees above normal, the last of the heavy snow blanket vanished in the county.

A thin coating of ice formed on streets and sidewalks last night, however, when a light rain froze as the mercury fell to 28 degrees from a high of 48 yesterday.

Forecasts said the temperature will rise tonight and the weather Saturday will be cloudy with occasional rain.

CAPTURES THIEF IN ELEVATOR

Operator Rushes Excited Youth To Basement, House Detective.

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—Jack McCracken captured a robber last night with the elevator he operated in a "loop" hotel.

An excited, suspicious-appearing youth rang from the 11th floor

"Main floor," he said, stepping into the elevator. McCracken noticed a bulge on the youth's hip and shot the car downward so fast his passenger lost balance. McCracken pulled up at the basement ad shoved him into the arms of a house detective, stationed there.

The youth said he was Joseph Mack, 19, and admitted holding up Roger Blackmer, Worcester, Mass., salesman, in a hotel room and taking $3.

A Farmer's Diary

Feb. 3.

THIS evening I stood upon the culvert of a new road a short distance west of our home. The sides were walled by massive, hand cut sandstone. I noticed on some of the newly shaped blocks different layers, rose red, shiny gray, dark brown, and taupe. Up the little valley there are two quarries of this identical rock. Many of the old time walls of barns and houses near by are of this fine, durable material.

The Chestnut Ridge that runs northwest from Pavonia to the Olivesburg road, the Ashland hill, east of our city; the famous natural carvings all along the scenic little stream that winds through Camp Avery Hand; some of the ledges unearthed by the steam shovels at Charles Mill dam and at Pleasant Hill dam still farther to the south—all these are native sandstone formations.

The buildings of North Main street and vicinity stand upon these outcroppings. The sewers and the buried conduits are sunk into the solid rock.

Somehow I like to look upon masonry of this material. It lends a touch that steel and concrete cannot give—a softer tone. It makes each dwelling a part of the earth on which it stands.

SINCLAIR LEWIS' LATEST BOOK ON LIBRARY'S LIST

'Prodigal Parents' Delves Into Modern Problem With Humor, Satire.

Sinclair Lewis' recently published book, "Prodigal Parents," has been received by the Mansfield Public library and will go into circulation the first of the week. It is the story of parents who rebel against the thoughtlessness and selfishness of youth. With deep insight into the problem of modern parents' indulgence of their children, Lewis portrays with humor and satire the efforts of Fred Cornplow to establish discipline in his grown son and daughter.

"I, Jahweh: A Novel in the Form of an Autobiography" by Robert Munson Grey, purports to be a personal record of the God whom the Jews of the Old Testament gave to the Western world. The narrative starts with the beginning of Jewish history and concludes with the present time.

"Winter In April" by Robert Nathan, is a fiction contribution to the library by the John Baxter Black Memorial fund. It is the story of Ellen, the 15-year-old granddaughter of Henry Pennifer, a retired scholar.

Other fiction this week is "They Fought For Liberty" by Adams; "The Streak" by Brand; "Key Next Door," by Eiker; and "Highland River" by Gunn.

Story on Communism.

Heading the non-fiction is "Assignment In Utopia," Eugene Lyon's experience in Soviet Russia from 1928 to 1934. Chief correspondent in Russia for the United Press, Mr. Lyons began his work with great enthusiasm for the Soviet cause. He explains how contact with realism destroyed his early philosophy of life and how faith in the ultimate good of Communism molded a new concept for him.

"You Have Seen Their Faces" is a new story on the Southern share-croppers, by Erskine Caldwell, illustrated with photographs. Louis Adamic's latest book, "House in Antigua," tells the story of an ancient house in Guatemala which endured through changing scenes for four centuries.

"After 1903—What?" is a collection of short essays by Robert Benchley. They are on a variety of subjects, done in his usual style of side-splitting humor. His sketch on modern poker playing is called "Ladies Wild," and he concludes it by vowing never again to play the game.

"Time and the Conways" by John Boynton Priestley is a play in three acts. The Conway family is presented as it lived in 1919 and as it is now, showing the changes that time has made in its characters and personalities.

Three new books on the profession of writing were added to the library collection this week. They are "How To Write For A Living," by Trentwell Mason White; "Newspaper Makeup," by John Edward Allen; and "Modern News Reporting" by Carl N. Warren.

Miriam Beard presents a scholarly history of the important part the business man has played in the development of civilization in her "History of The Business Man," which is a John Baxter Black Memorial book.

Other non-fiction this week is "Small Business of Your Own," by Brooks; "Planning for College," McConn; "Picturesque Word Origins;" "Something About Words," Weekley; "Country Craft Book," Johnston; "Architecture and Modern Life," Brownell and Wright; "Drawing For Art Students and Illustrators," Seaby; "Making a Photograph," Adams; "The Best of Swinburne," edited by Hyder and Chase; "Spirit of Paris," Cohen-Portheim; "My Jungle Trails," Verrill, and "Harp That Once—: A Chronicle of the Life of Thomas Moore" by Jones.

The Public Library is co-operating with America's Town Meeting of the Air by setting up a Town Meeting bookshelf, using the recommended lists sent out weekly from the New York Public Library by the Town Meeting organization.

FOOT SEVERED

Runaway Boy, 12, Who Prefers Dad Caught 4th Time

NEW YORK — (AP) — Howard Frankel's fourth runaway in 12 days from his unwanted home in Brooklyn ended early today when a newspaper employe, on his way home from work, found him at the Manhattan end of the Brooklyn bridge.

The 12-year-old youngster, who remains his father's boy in spite of a court order giving him to his mother, has disappeared so often that a special detective has been assigned to conduct all searches for him.

He did not return home from school yesterday and his description, now familiar to thousands in New York and in New Jersey towns, went out over police wires again.

Desperate in his attempts to return to his father, Julius Frankel, in Linden, N. J., the boy has threatened to kill himself.

"Want to go to New Jersey?" Lindermann asked him.

"Yes." The boy was eager. He followed Lindermann willingly to police headquarters

He admitted his mother, who is divorced from his father, was kind to him but—"I want my father."

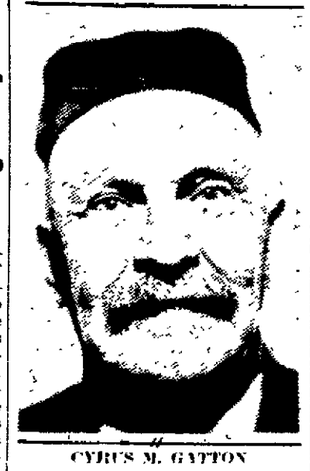
His Stories at End



CYRUS M. GATTON

DEATH CLAIMS 'CY' GATTON, 74

sent sportsmen into gales of laughter was the one about the rifle club at Gatton Rocks. Members, he said, must be expert shots; so expert that they must pass this test: a keg would be sent rolling down a steep hill and they must be able to fire 25 shots into the bunghole without ever touching the keg! The keg, he explained, would roll so fast that a shot sent into the bunghole would cross the inner space of the barrel and come out the same hole by the time the keg had revolved!

Another of his memorable stories was that of planting melons high on the hills around his home, equipping them with tiny plows so that when the melons ripened and fell from the vines they would roll down hill and plow the ground for next season. His wolf stories and hunting dog stories are told and retold wherever sportsmen or Scouts gather.

He was invited to join Lowell Thomas' famous "Tall Story" club a number of years ago when the radio commentator heard of his stories from other persons, and his certificate of membership which hung on the wall of his home, was one of his prized possessions.

Behind his amazing imagination and gift for story telling was a great love for nature and one of the major interests of his life was forestry and wild game conservation.

His home was at Gatton Rocks, on the hills above the Bellville-Butler road. The farm was a section in the vast wilderness of Ohio when Isaac and Hettie Gatton, his grandparents, came to Richland county and settled there in 1812. The farm has been in the possession of the family continuously since then.

The farm included almost a hundred acres in fruit orchards and the same number of acres in cultivated pine forests. He was recognized as an authority and pioneer in the development of evergreen forests in Ohio, and was one of the largest apple growers in this vicinity.

He became interested in Boy Scout work 17 years ago and has been an honorary member of the Johnny Appleseed Area for 15 years. He invited the Scouts to hold their annual spring camp at his farm and it has been held there each year. He had been the speaker at the Scout's annual father and son banquet for the past 17 years, for the reason that the Scouts would have no one else, and he had been scheduled to speak for the banquet again on March 17.

Managed Farm At 21.

He was born May 3, 1863, at the farm homestead. He began working on the extensive tract when he was 16 and became manager of it when he was 21. On June 25, 1884, he married Miss Etta Pearl Felton, who survives him.

Beside his wife, he is survived by a son, Earl W. Gatton, Gatton Rocks; two daughters, Mrs. V. D. Wade, who resides on the home farm; and Miss Bess Gatton of Toledo; a brother, Charles W. Gatton of this city; and a sister, Mrs. Samantha Smith of Galloway, O.

He was a member of the Jefferson grange of Bellville, and attended the Bellville Methodist church.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p. m. Monday at the Shaffer funeral home, Bellville, with Rev. Joseph O'Morrow, of the Lutheran church at Bellville, a close friend, officiating. Burial will be in Bellville cemetery.

SEEK STATE AID FOR IMPROVING OF W. FOURTH

City Officials Confer With Highway Engineer on Plan to Resurface 30-N.

Financial assistance from the state for the improvement of several highways within the municipality was sought by city officials today at a meeting with state highway officials at Ashland.

Mayor Claude M. Hunter said that a meeting had been arranged with District Highway Engineer A. I. Ault of Ashland for the purpose of seeking state aid for the improvement of "several state highways" in the city.

The delegation expected to attend the session today the mayor said, included Service-Safety Director Tracy C. Styert, City Engineer W. C. Statler, Boyd W. Wierman, Richland county resident state engineer and council's street committee.

File Specific Request.

He added that a specific request would be made for finances for the improvement of West Fourth street which is on state route 30N.

George Berg, chairman of the street committee said that improvements of West Fourth street by the city had been under consideration for some time but it was hoped to obtain state aid because it is a much traveled state highway.

A request was made last year by the city he said, but the state had already made its appropriations and could not allocate the necessary funds for the work.

Berg explained it has been the city's aim for several years to resurface and widen the street but no plans had yet been drafted by the engineering department.

Ankenbrand Back In Headlines With Plan at Yonkers

W. W. Ankenbrand, superintendent of the public schools of Yonkers, N. Y., who formerly headed the Mansfield school system, and who has a faculty of making front page news, was in the Yonkers headlines this week with his re-organization of the public schools in that city.

Ankenbrand submitted to the school board a plan which takes Yonkers out of the second rate class and places it in first, and solves a 20-year-old problem. The board approved the plan.

The plan defers a proposed building program of several million dollars, effects drastic economies and places 7,000 school children on a full-time program instead of part-time classes.

Ankenbrand left Mansfield in 1935 to head the public school system in Rockford, Ill., and after two years there accepted the position in Yonkers. He took up his work in Yonkers last July.

Father Brings Action Against Driver, Charges Negligence.

A suit for $5,000 damages and hospital expenses for his 17-year-old son had been filed in common pleas court today by Otho Frost, Mansfield, against William Maneese, of 91 South Diamond street.

Accusing Maneese of negligence and responsibility for an automobile-bicycle collision last May 15 on West Fifth street, Frost states in his petition that his son, Kenneth, suffered injuries which required two operations at General hospital.

The youth suffered a brain concussion, fractures of his arm and severe lacerations when he was knocked off his bicycle in a collision with a car driven by Maneese, the petition states.

out" of the infirmary several times before that.

Climaxes Inquiry.

The shooting capped a dramatic climax to investigation of a mounting total of violent deaths in Massachusetts mental hospitals. Police discovered last week that violent deaths since 1926 totalled more than 500, including eight slayings of patients by other inmates.

Aids of State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley, who uncovered the killings during a check of hospital records, said weapons ranged from pickaxes to fists.

State police detectives, ordered to investigate all hospitals by Gov. Charles F. Hurley, found 424 patients died from other than natural causes between 1926 and 1936, and reported 118 additional "sudden deaths" during 1937.

A legislative commission began investigation of the entire problem of hospital control, and Chairman Patrick J. Moynihan, of the state commission on administration and finance, began inquiry into business administration of the institutions.

Five of the slayings occurred at Medfield state hospital and the other three at Danvers hospital. Officials of the mental diseases department, which supervises the institutions, pointed out they were overcrowded 16 per cent beyond capacity.

SEWAGE PLANT EXPERT URGED

mechanical difficulties have been responsible for failure of the plant to handle sewage properly. He has complained that motors driving the agitators in the eration tanks are not the proper size to handle the designated load under full air pressure and that non-clogging pumps have clogged and have failed to operate properly since the plant has been in operation.

The mayor said he would ask council to rehire James Collier of Elyria, as the technical supervisor. Collier held that capacity from the time the plant was opened in March until September.

The state board in its report yesterday scored the city for breaking its agreement to retain technical supervision while the plant was under the operation of a class "C" operator.

Hunter pointed out that the city has no other alternative but to hire someone in this capacity as there is no class "A" sewage plant operators in Mansfield.

Sotherland, who was appointed by former Mayor Earl A. McFarland as operating engineer when the plant was opened, was reappointed by Hunter this year.

At the meeting yesterday was Fred R. Nelson of the Doerr company, Toledo, representing the contractors who installed the paddle equipment in the aeration tanks.

Hunter said Nelson had agreed to have motors checked for overloads, and if necessary install more powerful motors, if it was found that the present ones will not perform under the designed loads.

Original specifications called for 10-inch paddles, but it was found, according to Sotherland, that the five horsepower motors were insufficient to turn them under full air pressure. Later six-inch paddles were installed and the angles of the paddles changed.

Hunter said that Sowers, who designed the plant, had agreed to make the necessary inspections at the plant when mechanical difficulties had been remedied by the equipment companies. He added that he expected a report from the consulting engineer within the next few days containing certain recommendations.

Police Capture Quartet While Robbing Drug Store.

CLEVELAND —(INS)— Surprised in the act of robbing a drug store in suburban Shaker Heights, four young thugs were captured early today after a gun battle.

Five Shaker Heights policemen went to the drug store on a hunch, after the proprietor of a nearby drug store had reported to police that two men tried to force him to open his store. The hunch proved right—a robbery was in progress.

Put Man Out Of Life Adviser Says

By VIRGINIA LEE

Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could be stoics—real stoics trained not to be emotional about anything, but to take things as they come and let folks do what they wished, remaining calm and unperturbed?

We agonize over this and that, grow furiously angry, jealous, worried, etc., and what does it profit us? Nothing at all. Life goes on and we have wasted some perfectly good energy in all these feelings, and have gained nothing.

The story today is quite dramatic. A marriage in which the wife — whose letter I just read — thought she was marrying "the most wonderful man on earth." Don't we all?

She worked in laundries, in the fields, as a practical nurse, doing housework by the day, milking cows, etc. That was ten years ago and she has slaved ever since at the hardest and most laborious work to earn money to help out. She also has kept house, cooked, washed, ironed, mended and done all the other house chores. Then hubby became unfaithful and ran away from home and exhibited all sorts of cute little tricks.

Well, our heroine who signs herself BLUE EYED IRENE, kept right on working and finally there was a divorce and hubby married the woman whose home he broke up, and now works near where Irene lives and she can see him every day. The new wife drives him to and from work in the car which Irene helped pay for by the "sweat of her brow," and naturally that doesn't make her feel very happy. Irene has only a few sticks of second-hand furniture, but her former husband is buying a lot of brand new stuff for the present missus.

Oh, well, Irene, I think you should move away from this place where you see your former husband and his new wife every day, even if you only have one small room somewhere. You can safely leave all thought of vengeance to Life. Sooner or later it always punishes that kind of people plenty, although you may not know it.

Then resolutely put this man out of your mind. You had the happiness of loving and marrying a man you thought was fine and good. Nothing can take that away from you, even his present actions. Now you have your children and a chance to earn your own living and make a pleasant little home for yourself and to make friends. You are a good worker, and can make a place for yourself in whatever community you settle. Good luck to you.

If any of our readers have any encouraging words to send to this woman, I will be glad to publish them. She is not the first—and will not be the last — woman to give all she has of love and toil for the man she loved, only to see another woman get the good things of life that she never had.

Buttonholes made with a fine crochet thread do not tear out so easily as those made with ordinary sewing thread and can be made faster.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

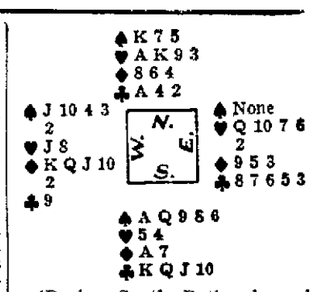
By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

WHO RUFFS FIRST?

When a defender has the same number of trumps as you, or more, the safest move usually is to shorten his holding by making him ruff a side trick before he can make you ruff. If you have to trump first, he may wind up with the last trump and then run his suit.

South started the bidding on this deal with 1-Spade, North called 2-Hearts, South 3-Clubs North 3-Spades and South 4-Spades, which West doubled.



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

The opening lead of the diamond K was won by South with the A. The spade A was cashed and when South discovered that West held as many trumps as himself, he immediately switched to the club suit, to force a trump or two out of West. The second club lead was ruffed by West, who then cashed his diamond Q and followed with another diamond, which the declarer trumped. A third club was led by South and when West ruffed, he had only two remaining trumps.

Three tricks had been cashed by West, a diamond and two trumps, but it was impossible for him to capture another trick, so that South made the doubled contract.

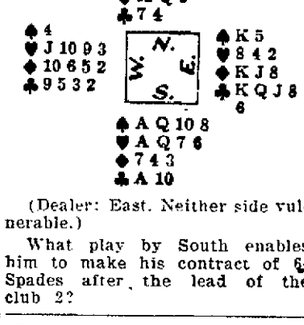
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

What play by South enables him to make his contract of 6-Spades after the lead of the club 2?

Pretty Chin, Throat Can Be Acquired

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty."

I'VE A HUNCH that a goodly portion of the fair sex will find the new necklines, for mid-winter and spring, rather trying. For to display them to advantage, one's neck must be perfect in every detail, and the indulgent miss whose chin has multiplied into two or three, or the girl whose neck has become flabby and loose-skinned, is not going to look smart, no matter how chic and unusual the neckline of her frock.

Jane Wyatt, screen actress, is one lass who can wear those new necklines advantageously, for Jane has a flawless throat and chinline. There is no sagging or double-chinned effect to mar the firm, youthful contours of her chinline. And she believes that one reason is because she's always maintained good head posture.

Exercises Help.

If you have acquired a sagging chinline, the first thing you must do is to attempt to improve your posture. Keep your head up and properly carried, if you wish a perfect neck and under-chin.

And practice neck exercises every day, too, in order to keep your neck and chin muscles strong and supple. Those outlined below are effective.

Lie flat on the floor, face downward, with hands at sides. Then raise your head, chest and legs from the floor, curving your body backward, until only your ribs and abdomen are resting on the floor. Press your head as far back as possible, then relax, lowering your head and legs to the floor.

On Hands and Knees.

Take a position on your hands and knees, your back flat. Then raise your head as far backward as possible and hollow your back, while still on your hands and knees. Next, let your head fall downward, completely relaxed, and hump your back upward.

Stand erect, hands on back of your head, chin dropped forward on your chest, and shoulders relaxed forward. Then slowly pull your head upward, resisting the pull with your hands and rear neck muscles, until your head and elbows are pulled well back.

The neck and chin muscles also benefit greatly from systematic firming and toning treatments. There's a preparation that has been designed solely for this purpose. It is a fragrant herbal lotion, and a silken chin strap comes with the preparation. Before using it smooth a generous coating of good tissue cream over the neck and under the chin. Then take a pad of absorbent cotton large enough to fit your under jaw and saturate it well with the lotion.

Place this over the tissue cream and tie it up with the chin strap. Wear the chin strap for 20 or 30 minutes, then remove it and finish the treatment by patting a good tissue cream into the skin with a firm, upward movement.

HOROSCOPE

For Saturday, February 5.

OPPORTUNITY FOR progress and happiness is shown by this day's sidereal operations. There are auguries for advancement, favors or financial increase in employment or in business. There may be sudden developments in these which might call for a change, or a speculative enterprise may turn out surprisingly. In personal associations there may be very pleasant and profitable relations.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a very pleasant and progressive year, with promotion or favors in employment or in lucrative business operations, probably of a sudden nature. Speculation is promising. Also important contacts with high personages in either business or social affiliation may prove profitable and pleasant.

A child born on this day may be an original if unorthodox thinker, with ambitions that will attract good fortune and probably the indorsement of influential persons. His gracious and kindly nature may assure social popularity and standing.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

Every line of my mother-in-law's figure spelled belligerency and determination as she told me to let her know as soon as Mary had finished breakfast, and announced that she was going upstairs to take into her own hands the question of Mary's going to the city.

That she meant to have her beloved granddaughter's departure postponed until the morrow was plainly to be seen, and I quailed a bit as I visualized what might be the emotional result of the impact of her will against that of Mary's.

It would be worse than useless for me to register any objection to her plan. I knew that from sad experience. But at least I could prepare Mary and Miss Whitlock for her coming, and I hurried through my breakfast, and rose with an elaborate apology.

Signals Dicky.

"If you'll excuse me," I said deferentially to my mother-in-law. "I'll see to Mary's breakfast, and I'll let you know the minute she has finished it so you can come upstairs and see her."

I was careful not to look toward Dicky as I spoke, but I gave him a little private signal of our own, and when I reached the second floor by way of the back stairs from the kitchen, I found him waiting for me.

"For the love of Abraham and the prophets, what's to be done?" he whispered. "I sure spilled the beans that time."

"You sure did," I retorted unsympathetically, "but there's no use grieving over them."

Tells Her Plan.

"You've got a plan, I can see," Dicky said in the hopeful tone of a small boy who has gotten himself into a "jam," and trustfully looks to his mother to get him out of it.

"It's rather a hopeless one, I'm afraid," I said, "but it's the best I can manage."

"What's my part?" he asked. "I assume you have a role for me."

"A very important one," I told him. "I want you to go back to your mother and dwell upon Mary's dread of staying upon the scene of her recent parting with Noel. Tell her how anxious the girl is to get to work and give it as your masculine best judgment that you believe it will do her more harm to thwart her going than to let her go."

"Is that all?" he asked in a tone fairly dripping with sarcasm. "Sure you don't want me to settle the war debts or any little thing like that?"

"No, I think we'll let them go over until tomorrow," I told him, laughingly. "But you know you're the only person on earth who has any real influence over your mother when you choose to exercise it. So hurry down and turn on your charm as high as possible."

Promises His Best.

"I'll do my best," he said doubtfully, "but the net result will probably be one loving son thrown out of the farmhouse on his ear. And by the way, what are you going to do for your country in this crisis?"

"All that a woman may do," I answered. "I'm going up and warn Mary and Miss Whitlock that you mother is coming to settle the question. Mary may be able to coax her grandmother over to her way of thinking, and I'll give Miss Whitlock a pointer to keep the note of authority down, and play up the flattery."

Dicky made me a low bow, sweeping the ground with an imaginary plumed hat.

"The best of luck, Madame Machiavelli," he said. "He who is about to get smacked ingloriously, salutes you."

And on that burlesqued note, we separated, and smiling ruefully, I went back to Mary's room from which Katie was just emerging.

Style in Draperies.

Whether you are furnishing a new home or refurnishing the one you now are living in, you probably will want to have some fresh draperies. But before buying your window draperies you should know what to watch for. Here's some timely advice from Good Housekeeping studio:

Choose for beauty of design and color of course, but ask: If the fabric is cotton or linen—is it preshrunk, washfast, sunfast? If it is glazed chintz—is it dry cleanable? Or find, if possible, some of the preshrunk, washable chintz with "everglaze" finish. If it is upholstery fabric—is the weave firm and the color fast? Take the trouble to find out the maker's name and get fabrics that are known to be good.

If you find it a problem to treat a group of windows, this is how the studio suggests you solve that problem.

For instance, for a group of two windows in a bedroom, hang two pairs of ruffled curtains, either of swiss organdie or net, tied back. These are attractive under a single pair of decorative plain colored chintz drapes hung from a rod concealed by a shaped valance. Add washable window shades to give protection at night.

Or in a dining room with a group of three windows, use drapes of glazed flowered chintz on a dark ground, edged with a ball fringe the color of the flowers in the chintz. Hang these under a long, straight valance, and drape back at the sides. To give light and yet privacy, hang net glass curtains to fall straight to the window sill. Under these you will, of course, want window shades.

My Neighbor Says:

Philodendrons are easily grown from slips. Plant without roots in a pot of soil and set pot in water and place in a sunny window. It will also grow in water.

Each little opening in gas burners should burn a steady blue flame. Have just enough flame to keep liquids at boiling point. Boiling liquids are no hotter when boiling rapidly than when boiling slowly.

Hanging sofa pillows in a good current of air removes loose dust and helps to fluff up the feathers and to sweeten them.

Handshake Or Bow at Reception?

By Emily Post.

Dear Mrs. Post: Although we have found at our college that the general rule, which is based essentially upon consideration for others, takes care of most of our problems, there are times when arbitrary conventions make such reasoning impossible. In my long experience I have never run into a situation where handshaking was omitted in a formal receiving line, except perhaps at big evening balls. And yet, some of the people here think that this handshaking is the sign of formality and that to bow would be more in keeping with the democratic, more informal standards practiced here. Will you clear up this confusion.

Answer: It is just the other way around. A bow is formal; the handshake, informal. At an assembly ball, for example, all hostesses stand in line and every one arriving bows or curtsies to the hostesses. By this I mean the men bow ceremoniously, bringing their heels together and bowing from the hips. The women actually curtsey. At all receptions or parties that can be called informal, or at least not extremely formal, hostesses shake hands with the arriving guests. To merely nod your head as you pass would be showing very bad manners and is permissible only on occasions when those standing at the door are not actually receiving. By this, I mean at public occasions where tickets are bought at the door and members of a committee are merely present to see that the exhibits are not handled and to answer questions asked by interested visitors, a nod of recognition is sufficient.

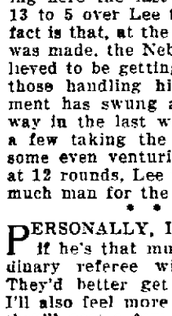
West's Loss of Nash Fails To Shift Odds on Tilt Here



By Davis J. Walsh

International News Service Sports Editor.

Odds listed at 13 to 5 on Apostoli tonight, but it'll be a great fight, according to the other fellow.

FRED APOSTOLI, the very singular young man who slaughters middleweight champions, one by one, and still remains a challenger, will engage Glen Lee, the ingenue Ace (Wildcat) Hudkins from Nebraska, tonight and, if I understand the script, the officials are going to ring the bell and then run for the corner. The scene is to be Madison Square Garden, but it seems that the Chicago stockyards might be more appropos. These gents are so tough they probably part their hair with a rake.

It will be Apostoli's first New York appearance since stopping Champion Freddie Steele a month ago which, in turn, was his first appearance since stopping Champion Marcel Thil, of France, last September. He also stopped Challenger Solly Krieger, so that, as a result of some hilarious matchmaking, he's now entitled to the middleweight championship of Esthonia. The next thing you know, he'll be recognized in Kalamazoo, too.

He gave Steele such a slathering here the last time that he's 13 to 5 over Lee tonight and the fact is that, at the time the match was made, the Nebraskan was believed to be getting a throw-in by those handling him. But sentiment has swung a bit the other way in the last week, with quite a few taking the short end and some even venturing to say that, at 12 rounds, Lee will be just too much man for the other guy.

* * *

PERSONALLY, I'd have to say, if he's that much man, no ordinary referee will do tonight. They'd better get Clyde Beattie. I'll also feel more comfortable, if they'll post a few attendants outside the ropes with prongs and pikes to keep the fur-bearing specimens at bay. After all, they might not be strict vegetarians.

In fact, I'm beginning to wonder whether I'm right about the Chicago stockyards. Maybe I meant the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Son of Champ On Bill Here

Frankie Talaber, holder of one of the best records compiled in modern wrestling, has been signed to appear in the main event of a wrestling program carded Monday night in the Armory. He will meet Sterling (Silver) Davis of Texas, a rugged light heavyweight.

Talaber is the son of Lou Talaber, middleweight champion of years gone by. The elder Talaber, convinced that his son could carry on where he had left off, trained Frankie for ten years before permitting him to engage in a professional match

Those long years of tutelage had their effect Young Talaber has never been defeated. His most amazing victory was scored over Coach Billy Thom, Indiana university prof., who tutored the last U. S. Olympic team.

Talaber's other victims include "Whitey" Wahlberg, great Minnesota grappler, and George Dusette, former light-heavyweight champion. And these victories have come to Frankie at an early age, for he is now only 23 years old.

LEGION CLUB TOO TOUGH FOR ITS OWN GOOD

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

ONE of the oddities of the current bowling season is presented by the wood wreckers of the American Legion entry in the Club league.

Matches in the circuit are bowled on a handicap basis, and, of course, this accounts for the team's peculiar record.

Judging from the averages, the Legionnaires rank as one of the strongest clubs in the circuit, if not the strongest.

Yet despite the fact that they consistently outscore their opponents, the Legion outfit is in last place in the standings, the victim of the handicap bugaboo

The Legionnaires have won only 26 games out of 63, but dominate virtually all of the records

The three highest team totals of the season in the league have been compiled by the ex-servicemen, not to mention the high single game

High individual records and averages also include a number of Legion keglers. Earl Robertson, for instance, is second high in the three-game division with a spectacular 650 total.

In other words, the Legionnaires are too darn tough for their own good.

The team consists of Brig Young, Roy Craig, Jimmy Smith, Joe Thull, Jim Will and Robertson.

Madison and Butler Officials Postpone Game Tonight Because of Pox Scare.

THE game that topped the Richland county league schedule this week was postponed late yesterday afternoon because of a smallpox scare

Madison high cagers were scheduled to play at Butler tonight in a game that had a definite bearing on second place, but because of the quarantine of Wayne E. Miller, principal of the Mansfield suburban school, and two other persons in the district for smallpox, it was decided to postpone the game, Olan LeRue, Madison superintendent, said after conferring with Butler school officials.

The game will be played on a date to be decided later, LeRue stated.

The postponement reduces tonight's county league program to two games Lucas plays at Bellville and Union performs at Lexington. Ontario is idle until Saturday when it is host to Bellville.

BUCYRUS BOY WINS

Jim Brickman, Bucyrus, reached the finals in the novice division of the Golden Gloves tournament in Cleveland Thursday by defeating Bob Holloway of Cleveland in the semi-finals. The Bucyrus lad meets Eddie Pro, another Cleveland boy, in the 160-pound finals.

Heavy Gym Program May Crowd Out Tourney.

Due to the heavy gym program at the Y. M. C. A., it is not definite whether the organization will again sponsor an amateur boxing tournament, Donald C. Cram, physical director, announced today.

If the Y stages the tournament, Cram indicated it will probably be necessary to stage it elsewhere.

Cram said he has conferred with Junior Chamber of Commerce officials regarding a tie-up in sponsoring the fistic event, but nothing definite has developed.

THE PIPER'S TUNE

By JOSEPH McCORD

CHAPTER XX

"Oh! You mean the chauffeur and—the other man. They don't really have names like that, do they? It sounds too frivolous."

"Oh, they're rather human, in their way. If you want some exercise, tiptoe over to the kitchen door and peek. Here, I'll show you."

Through the partly open door, Caradad peered into the lamplit kitchen. There at a long table sat three men, the twinkling-eyed Lief in the center, the chauffeur on his right, the footman on his left. Caradad gave a little gasp of astonishment as she recognized the two guests. They both were in their shirtsleeves, their stiff-collared tunics cast aside, eating with great gusto and grinning at the sallies of their host and the good-natured Karen who seemed to be enjoying the onslaught. Stranger still, both were bald and their heads glistened.

"I'm so glad you let me see them," Caradad observed seriously, when she was back in her chair again and sure that the door was closed.

"Why?" Severance asked curiously.

"I've been perfectly in awe of them, every time they've been around I wouldn't have been surprised to hear them start singing, 'With constabulary duties to be done . . .' Like the Gilbert and Sullivan policemen, you know."

Severance took his pipe from his mouth. "When," he said slowly, "have I heard that? You are refreshing, for a fact."

A flush that was not from the fire stole into Caradad's cheeks. She shifted uncomfortably under the man's steady gaze.

"I like you a lot," he remarked.

There seemed to be nothing to say in reply to John Severance's unexpected and disconcerting statement. Caradad looked away and said nothing. Severance did not amplify his statement, either. It had come out in such a matter-of-fact fashion that he might not have considered it necessary. When he spoke, it was to change the subject.

"I was up North the other day, as far as Duluth. Met a friend of yours."

"Mr. Cantine?" Caradad guessed thankfully. "I knew he was traveling in that direction on business."

"So he told me. We had quite a visit—dinner together."

"That must have been pleasant. It's nice to run into friends when one is away from home." Caradad looked dreamily into the embers. She was thinking of Terry's meeting her at the station. What was he doing today? Was he getting out of his difficulties? Her train of thought was broken by another abrupt statement from Severance. He had a way of doing that, it seemed.

"Miss Caradad," he began meditatively, then hesitated. "I like to say that name—never met it in the flesh before. Hope you don't mind."

"Of course not." Then she added impulsively, "'Miss Caradad' sounds like home."

"Stop me, if I'm out of bounds. But you said something about an investment . . . made me wonder . . . well, if it were a substantial amount. Mind telling me? I've nothing to sell."

"Why, no . . . I guess you wouldn't call it much. You see, I had a chance to sell our ranch after my father died and . . ."

"And you have the proceeds on your hands."

"Yes, Mr. Severance."

"I'd guess that you had no one to look out for but yourself. Women with dependents don't like to gamble—so I've noticed. If you have the urge, and the margin, why don't you invest in yourself?"

"What do you mean?"

"Buy yourself some of the pleasures of life—your own kind I fancy that travel would be one. Get out and see the things and places that interest you. It doesn't cost much these days—you can do it on the dividends of a few thousand. Let somebody else play for the big stakes. Do your investing at home. Do I sound like one of those professional advice slingers one hears on the radio?"

"No indeed! It's very kind of you."

"Well, if you really think so, I'm minded to ask you to promise me something. What's the name of that legal light . . ."

"Judge Pomphrette?"

"That's the one. He sounds good to me. I could wish that you wouldn't drop any money in any market without his okay."

"Oh, I wouldn't."

"I remarked before that it's none of my business, but that does relieve me very much. It's a promise?"

"It's a promise."

"Good. Please don't think that I underrate your business acumen. But I'd be trimmed like the veriest sucker if I tried to buck the market, and I fancy you wouldn't be much better off. It's a game you have to learn before you go up against the professionals."

"I suppose so."

Caradad was thinking deeply, coming to a conclusion that very much surprised her. John Severance not only was very nice, but there was something—well, substantial about him. She had the feeling that he was a good friend and could be trusted. His standing and reputation would assure that. He had said he "liked her a lot." His sound and frank advice proved it quite to her satisfaction. Nevertheless, she was a trifle breathless as she leaned forward in her chair to say, "Mr. Severance, may I ask you something?"

"Of course," he replied instantly.

"Perhaps I shouldn't, but . . . well, when you asked me to—to promise about Judge Pomphrette, you . . ."

"Go on."

"You had been speaking previously of Terry Cantine. Was that why?"

"Hold on!" Severance sat erect in his chair. "You know as well as I that isn't exactly cricket. Cantine is nothing more than a—a mere acquaintance. A business acquaintance, at that."

"But he's more than that to me." Caradad persisted steadily. "Terry is almost the oldest f[riend] I have in the world . . . I guess he's about the best. I would trust him with anything, but . . . but he doesn't trust me."

"What do you mean, he doesn't trust you?" Severance sank back in his chair and stared from under his lowered brows.

"Well . . . I spoke to him about investing some money for me. He wouldn't do it."

"And that," said Severance, pulling strongly on his dead pipe, "is much to his credit."

"Why?"

"Because a man doesn't like to handle a friend's money—particularly if the friend's a woman."

"But you told me Terry sold securities to his friends."

"Did I?"

"Yes I know I shouldn't ask you, but he's almost like my older brother. I can't help wishing I knew what his friends, his men friends, I mean, think of . . . well, th way he does business. I can't make it very clear, I know. But, for some reason, I feel that he's not having smooth sailing. It worries me. I can't help it."

"I see." Severance leaned forward and rapped the ash from his pipe on the hearth. He thrust it into his pocket and scowled at the dying fire. "Look here, Miss Caradad, you're putting me rather on a spot. I see what you mean . . . but I can't very well discuss another man's business. Especially, when I don't know much about it. I do know that Cantine works the social racket, and there's nothing wrong with that. I've never had any transactions with him myself."

"Would you?"

"Frankly, no. But that's mainly because I leave those matters to advisers who know more than I do."

"I see . . . I hoped you could tell me. I'm sorry."

"Wait a minute. Since you're worried about the chap, that puts it in a different light, rather. There's no harm, I suppose, in trying to do another fellow a good turn. We'll look at it this way. Do you have any influence with him?"

"Oh, no. I hadn't seen nor heard from him for a very long time . . . until I came here."

"M-m . . . I was wondering."

"Wondering what?"

"If it might be a good idea to slip him some advice . . . for you to, I mean."

"What would it be?"

"Merely to watch his step a little. Don't ask me to put it any plainer than that. Because I won't."

"I know what you mean," Caradad answered slowly. "I guess I shouldn't have said anything about it. But thank you."
